BATTLESHIP BLOWN UP

200 OFFICERS AND MEN DEAD, 100 INJURED ON FRENCH VESSEL

TOULON, March 12.—An explosion in the powder magazine of the French battleship Euralite to-day resulted in the death of 200 officers and men and the serious injury of 100 more. The big battleship was wrecked.

The Euralite was lying at the arsenal dock within the harbor this morning. An inspection of the machinery and magazine had been ordered. Between 11 and 12 o'clock, while the officers were making their rounds, there came a frightful report, followed by others in quick succession.

Plates Torn Asunder.

The great plates of the vessel were torn asunder. Fragments of armor, decks, superstructure, small boats and mangled human remains were hurled high in the air. Following the explosion, which wrecked the main magazine, came a succession of lesser ones as smaller quantities of explosives and torpedoes went up.

Terror seized the officers and crew, the wild scenes on the deck as shock after shock followed almost beggaring description. In their terror and inability to determine the source of the trouble scores of the men jumped into the harbor.

It is believed that many were drowned.

Shock Shakes City

The shock of the explosion caused the entire city to tremble and a rain of burned powder, cinders and debris settled down over the scene of the disaster.

Up to this hour the cause of the explosion is unknown.

Science Leader's Adopted Son Tells of MRS. EDDY'S FRENZY

Dr. E. J. Foster Eddy and Aged Woman's Cousin Become Parties to Suit.

Bombard and control by those who surrounded her, until her mind was weakened and she would reel around the room, while her mad shrieks would fill the house, is the condition in which Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy was found, according to the story told by her adopted son, Dr. Ebenezer J. Foster Eddy, who has joined the other relatives of the aged woman in asking for an accounting at the hands of those who are handled the funds in connection with the Christian Science work.

In Eddy's attitude in the case against the so-called cabinet of his foster mother, and his startling statement as to what he found at her home, is one of the most surprising and sensational features of the remarkable legal proceeding.

Mother Fled in Terror.

The adopted son went to see his mother, he said, but no sooner had she set eyes on him than she stumbled away from him in terror, shrieking at the top of her voice, "Murder!" later the son learned, he states, that his mother had been made to believe that he intended to kill her.

That Calvin A. Frye was particularly opposed to his adoption is one of the assertions made by Dr. Eddy. Here is the son's story which is a notable addition to the allegations that have already been made in connection with the household at Chestnut.

"Because of false reports that were circulated about me, I hurried to my mother. At sight of me sprang to her feet, shrieked for help and darted on her feet, shrieked for help and darted out of the room. I followed, thinking she had been seized by one of her mad attacks; but she fled, stumbling, falling, dragging herself along in terror.

"Through it all she never ceased to shriek 'Murder' at the top of her voice.

"Three weeks later I learned the truth. Mrs. Eddy had been convinced that I was going to kill her. In her weakness of mind she had believed this and my arrival had terrified her.

"Dr. Foster declared that Calvin A. Frye was resentful of his adoption from the very start, and that not long after its accomplishment he began to comprehend that his mother was being suppressed and dominated and that she weakened mentally under the pressure.

"She was dazed and fooled by cunning tricks," he said. "Gradually her strength failed and periods of frenzy seized her."

His Downfall Planned.

"I have seen her rush around the room, hiding a bottle with her cries. In these paroxysms she was uncontrollable, and as the conviction became more apparent her attacks increased in frequency."

He declares that at this time his downfall was decided upon, that his account books were secretly removed and falsified and that Mrs. Eddy was deceived into making charges against him.

"My only purpose in joining in this petition is to do my duty," said Foster. "I have good reason to believe every word alleged in the bill of equity which Senator Chandler has prepared.

"For years I have known much and sus-

JEROME INSISTS THAW PLANNED TO KILL WHITE

FIGHTS AT RESUMPTION OF TRIAL TO GET IN BROTHER-IN-LAW'S STORY.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, March 12.—Harry K. Thaw, when he went to Madison Square Roof Garden with his wife, Evelyn, on the evening he killed Stanford White, expected to find the noted architect there, looked over the crowd for him and discussed with White's brother-in-law, James C. Smith, circumstances under which a person would be justified in taking human life, according to the contention of District Attorney Jerome.

The District Attorney is bending every energy of his fertile mind to prove this by Mr. Smith, who was allowed to begin his statement to that effect yesterday. Lawyer Delmas stopped him just as he had blocked the testimony of about all he witnesses the District Attorney called in rebuttal.

When Jerome went to court to-day to renew his efforts to show that Thaw was perfectly sane when he shot down the former friend of his young wife, he insisted on the continuance of Mr. Smith's story. Mr. Smith was recalled to the stand, and a long legal argument followed.

TO FIGHT NEW TESTIMONY.

Evelyn Thaw, when she was on the stand and told the story of the tragedy, testified that her husband caught sight of White by accident as they were leaving, and that they did not go there with any idea of finding the man whom they had seen short ly before that at dinner in Cafe Martin.

Delmas fights the introduction of Smith's story on the ground that it is new testimony, and the time for that has passed. All the District Attorney has a right to introduce now, according to the defence, is rebuttal testimony.

Smith, just before court adjourned yesterday, said that he saw Thaw on the roof garden before the shooting. Thaw walked over to where he was sitting. Smith was questioned by Jerome.

"LOOKED AROUND INTENTLY."

Q.—Did he then recognize you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you have any conversation with him? A.—Yes.

Q.—State what his conversation then was with you.

Mr. Delmas—I object, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Jerome—What I am trying to show is the perfectly sane conversation of this man.

Question read by the stenographer:

The Witness—Mr. Thaw put his three people in their seats and turned about and looked around the room, walked into the middle of the floor, went to the Madison Avenue side. He stood there about one minute looking very intently over the heads of Mr. Delmas objected and an argument ensued which was not completed at the hour of adjournment.

ALIENISTS IN CONFERENCE.

The District Attorney was in conference until after midnight with seven alienists. The conference was held secretly, at the rooms of the Bar Association, but it was understood that a plan was decided upon in case Justice Fitzgerald overthrows rule out the line of rebuttal attempted by the prosecution yesterday. All the conference were Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton, Dr. Charles P. McDonald and five other alienists who have been engaged by the State.

The District Attorney's cause, as he hopes to get it before the jury, is that first, the story of Evelyn Thaw regarding her treatment by White was not true, thus to destroy sympathy for the wronged girl and the husband who loved her; second, that Evelyn Thaw did not tell Thaw the her story on the witness stand, and that he knew of some of the alleged facts long before the time she says she told Thaw all in Paris; third, that Thaw was sane when he killed White, except that he was in a jealous rage.

Thaw was greatly elated to-day when he returned to court, over this turn the case has taken. Not once during the rebuttal was there any intention on the District Attorney's part to endeavor to bring out anything as to his present mental condition, but on the contrary the effort was to show that he was sane when he killed White.

This pleased him because it removed the fear of the madhouse that had haunted him and worried him more than any thought of the death chair.

YANKEE GUNBOAT OFF FOR HONDURIAN CRISIS

WASHINGTON, March 12.—The gunboat Marietta, now at Bonefields, Nicaragua, is expected to be ordered to Puerto Cortes, Honduras, which is said to be threatened with attack by a Nicaraguan naval force. Orders have also been given Admiral Evans, commanding the Atlantic Fleet, to send an additional gunboat to Central American waters. Either the Dubuque or Paducah will go.

Denials of the reported fight between Minister Merry of the United States and President Zelaya of Nicaragua are forthcoming from many quarters here. Senor Corea, Nicaraguan Minister, has made public a dispatch from the Nicaraguan Consul at New Orleans, denying the story on the authority of Samuel Weil, whose claim it was said Mr. Merry was pushing when the quarrel and fight occurred. Mr. Weil is quoted as saying Minister Merry was shown every consideration by the Nicaraguan authorities.

A mail report from Minister Merry, sent from San Jose, Costa Rica, on February 16, tells of an attempt by Nicaraguans to search the ship on which he was sailing for arms. It is known too, that Merry once complained to the State Department that his dispatches were interfered with.

LAWSON HAS SMASHED NEVADA-UTAH PRICES

BOSTON MAN AND ASSOCIATES HAVE CLEARED MILLIONS.

Following Thomas W. Lawson's announcement that he dare not assume the responsibility of saying to the public, "Go ahead and buy Nevada-Utah," the bottom dropped out of that stock on the curb this morning and $2,000,000 was lost.

Last night Nevada-Utah closed at 6 and a fraction. By 10 o'clock this morning it was quoted at 3 bid and 4¾ was asked.

The first sale on the Boston curb was 1,500 shares, and five minutes after the stock had dropped to 3¾. Later it recovered to 4 and then fell back again hourly. Every house on State street has sold the stock this morning.

Lawson Followers Lose.

Most of those who lost were Lawson followers, who bought several days ago, when he began to express confidence in Nevada-Utah in his newspaper advertisements.

Although the losses of some of the holders of the stock was heavy there was very little excitement on the curb when the break began to develop.

In New York hundreds of thousands of dollars were lost in the first five minutes of trading, and reports from there say that Mr. Lawson and his associates have cleared $2,000,000.

Wall street as a class was short of the stock, and several traders mad from $10,000 to $20,000 on the break. Most of the big brokerage houses expecting such a crash had sold out their customers' stock as fast as it was purchased and replaced it to-day at the opening, thereby making tremendous profits.

Down to $3.50 a Share.

In New York the stock sold down to $3.50 per share in the first break. There were half a dozen different markets for it at the same moment of the opening.

Nevada-Utah was selling at $5 a share when Lawson began his manipulations. He advanced it to 8¾.

The break to $3.50 was made without a rally and the stock was still being quoted in and drifting down long after the excitement had worn itself out. The only buying in New York was on the part of the stock exchange houses which had been short of it.

1 DEAD, 3 HURT, IN COLLISION

WILLIAMSTOWN, March 12.—As a result of a head-on collision between an express train and freight on the Fitchburg division of the Boston & Maine here to-day one man is dead and three badly injured.

The trains were No. 628, from Troy, N. Y., for Boston, and a westbound freight train. The freight was on a siding. The crew say that signals had been put out, but the engineer and fireman of the express claim that no signals were visible.

Both engines were badly smashed. C. G. Ransom, of Johnson, N. Y., was instantly killed. The injured are A. P. Young of Mechanicville, N. Y., engineer of the freight; James Johnson of Albany, engineer of the express and Walter Lucas, a fireman of the express.

pected much. I have only been waiting an opportunity to strike a blow for the resent of this kind-hearted woman who made me her son. And I am happy now to make a move, menaced day and night for years as I have been by the clique at Concord.

"Even now, in pledging my aid and cooperation to Senator Chandler, I am taking great risks. Frye and his agents will surely try to destroy me. I will be made a target for accusations. All the powerful machinery in the hands of the conspirators will be set in motion to crush me. But nothing shall turn me from my duty. Nothing shall turn me from my duty. I still love Mrs. Eddy, and I am willing to sacrifice myself, if necessary, in her protection.

AGAINST FOES OF CULT.

"Furthermore, there is nothing but kindness in my heart for Christian Science. This petition is not aimed at the cult. It is only against its greatest enemies, who hold prisoner its honored founder and high priestess.

"My first meeting with the wonderful woman destined to adopt me as her son was when I entered Mrs. Eddy's personal class in her secluded metaphysical college.

"Matters progressed speedily, when one day she called me to her room and privately she told me of her love for me as a mother's love—and asked me to become her son. She signed a deed.

"I was adopted by Mrs. Eddy in 1884, at the age of 41," said Dr. Foster. "I was visiting Waltham relatives when Mrs. Eddy had the papers made out in Massachusetts. She was an anxious woman. She never completed right away that she sent them up for me to sign from Concord. Those records are on file in the probate court for Suffolk.

WEAKENED MENTALLY.

"Almost from the start of my adoption I realized that Calvin A. Frye was a resentful of my adoption.

"The next happening of importance was the resignation of my mother's publisher and her selection of me for the post. I took the position, and for the next seven or eight years I was seeing and hearing strange things. I began to understand that my honored mother by adoption was being suppressed and dominated.

"She, herself, was weakening mentally under the pressure. Under the guise of their promptings, she was continually altering the text of 'Science and Health,' and insisting upon the immediate publication of new editions. At last I rebelled and openly protested.

"I shall never forget how she glanced over her shoulder apprehensively and in a whisper she said: 'You must not talk that way. Ebenezer, the money now in circulation we print the more money we get.'

"That whispered word was the key to Mrs. Eddy's real nature as the day different from the Mrs. Eddy I knew, beginning to yield to the power of the clique—a power she was later to overthrow.

"At this time I was living at Pleasant View, where Frye was established supreme control. Day after day, with ever-growing alarm, I watched the change in my adored one's agonies. She was dazed and fooled by cunning tricks. Gradually my strength failed and periods of frenzy seized her.

WAS UNCONTROLLABLE.

"I have seen her rush around her room hitting the walls and furniture. In these paroxysms she was uncontrollable, and as the convulsions grew more oppressive, these attacks increased in frequency.

"At dead of night, on one occasion, I was aroused by Frye knocking at my door. 'Come quick,' said he, 'Mrs. Eddy needs you.' She thinks that a rumor has suddenly grown on accident. She is afraid for her reputation.'

"And don't know what arts had been practised upon the unfortunate woman that night; but I do know that I found her crouching under the bed clothes and crinching at her heroic self with both hands. Morning dawned before I could quiet her. It was then that my doubtful secret was decided upon.

"First my account books were secretly removed, one at a time, and falsified. Next Mrs. Eddy was deceived into making charges against me, but this plan failed. The second blow came quicker than I expected. There was a woman in my office and I had befriended her. She had daughters to support and I gave her employment.

FLED IN TERROR.

"False reports were boldly circulated about me. I hurried to my mother's room. She was in a terrible frenzy and I was attacked for help and darted out of the room. Of course, I followed, thinking she had been stricken. I found her in the hallway, pacing, pacing, stumbling, falling, dragging herself to her feet again.

"Through it all she never ceased to shriek. Between the words I could distinguish that I could not quiet her. I left her, locked myself, and took the next train back to Boston.

"Two weeks later I learned the truth. Mrs. Eddy had been convinced that I was using hypnotism on her in her weakness of mind she had believed this, and a word or act terrified her. But I managed to see another and convince her of my innocence with the actual proofs.

"The shock would not say from what place his letters came, nor would he give

AMENDED BILL IN EDDY EQUITY SUIT

Special to the Boston American.

CONCORD, N. H., March 12.—Two new plaintiffs made their first appearance in the Eddy cases into yesterday, when a supplementary bill in equity was filed with the Clerk of the Superior Court here.

The plaintiffs, each of whom enters the suit as next friend to Mrs. Eddy, are not adopted son, Dr. Ebenezer J. Foster Eddy, of Waterbury, Vt., and her second cousin, Fred W. Baker of Epsom, N. H.

The supplementary bills were brought to Concord from Boston by John W. Kelley of Portsmouth, of counsel for the petitioners, and were filed by him with Amos J. Shurtleff, clerk of the Superior Court. They read as follows:

"State of New Hampshire, Merrimack County.

"Petition in equity, Eddy vs. Frye et al.

"Ebenezer J. Foster Eddy, of Waterbury, in the County of Washington, in the State of Vermont, hereby joins in said petition in equity as next friend of the said Mary Baker Glover Eddy, and says, as follows:

"That he has become convinced that Mrs. Eddy and for a long time has been incapable of intelligently conducting or receiving an account of her business and property, and that the same is being misused and wasted by the defendants without giving a proper accounting therefor.

"Wherefore he joins in the bill and concurs in the prayers contained therein.

"EBENEZER J. FOSTER EDDY.

By his solicitors, John W. Kelley, Martin & Howe, William E. Chandler.

"March 11, 1907.

Was Asked to Visit Her.

"Fred Walter Baker of Epsom, in said County of Merrimack, hereby joins in said petition in equity as next friend of the said Mary Baker Glover Eddy, and he says, as follows:

"(1) That he is a second cousin of the said Mary Baker Glover Eddy; his father being William Milton Baker, whose father was Joseph Baker, who was a brother of Mark Baker, the father of the said Mary Baker Glover Eddy.

"(2) That in September, 1906, he was sent by his employers, J. P. & W. F. Emond, carriage makers, who are doing business at No. 2115 Washington street, now on Parker street, Roxbury, to visit Pleasant View to examine and repair and effect certain carriages of Mrs. Eddy; that he made known to Mrs. Eddy his errand, that to her, and she treated him with cordiality on his first visit and also on a few days later, when he finished work on her carriages, and she asked him to call in the house during his work, which he did, and took his meals with Mrs. Eddy. Mr. Frye and a woman of the household and helped to the table one night; that she showed him about the house and invited him to come to visit her with his wife and children at any time. Mr. Frye, however, told him that he ought not to make that visit.

"(3) That not long after, in accordance with the above invitation, while at living in Boston, he prepared to visit Mrs. Eddy, intending to take his wife and little girl; that he wrote to Mrs. Eddy, as she had told him to do, that he was coming, but received no reply, and, therefore, with mortification and reluctance gave up the visit. During the next three years he wrote Mrs. Eddy telling her of his well-being himself of her invitation to visit her, but he received no reply, and he believes that she was not permitted to see either of the letters.

Refused by Frye.

"(4) That in the Summer of 1905 he moved from Boston to Epsom, N. H., and in September or October he made an effort to see Mrs. Eddy; that he went to Concord and to her house and was refused the privilege of seeing her by Mr. Frye; that he urged his right to see her because of the invitation given to Mrs. Eddy to come; that Mr. Frye replied that Mrs. Eddy had much work to do to receive visitors and received none but by appointment; that he would receive the request for an interview, and if it was granted would so notify the said Baker. He also said that said Baker could see Mrs. Eddy that day if he would go down to the street corner about 4 o'clock and stand there and see her drive up in her carriage. This he refused to do, gave up in effort and never received any reply to his request for an interview.

"(5) That he believes that Mrs. Eddy is a virtually a prisoner in her own house, that she is kept secluded by the defendants, Frye and others, that she is not capable under all conditions of managing her own business, but that it is all in the hands and control of said Frye and others, so that there has not been a due and proper accounting by those self-constituted guardians of her person and property.

"(6) Wherefore he joins all the prayers of the petition already filed in this case.

"FRED W. BAKER."

DEATH OR RANSOM FOR STOLEN MARVIN BOY

DETECTIVE SUGGESTS DELAWARE SOLONS ARRANGE FOR CHILD'S REDEMPTION.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, March 12.—The kidnapers of little Edward N. Marvin, Jr., threaten to kill him unless a big ransom is immediately paid.

Dr. Marvin, father of the stolen boy, today had three letters in his home at Lester, Del., from the parties who asserted they were the kidnappers. One was marked in Jersey City. The two others were forwarded to Delaware by Private Detective George Sheldon of New York, who believes that the child is now in hiding somewhere on the Canadian border.

Sheldon has already opened communication with the kidnappers, he asserted today, and has received letters from some of the Governor of Delaware to negotiate for turning over the reward and the return of the boy.

Ransom or Death.

The second letter, from the Canadian border, which was forwarded to the father today, stated that the child would be returned upon the immediate payment of a substantial ransom, as yet undetermined.

"I have been approached from some professional crooks who knew me when I was a detective sergeant," writes Sheldon, "and who believe that Dr. Marvin will want to negotiate the return of the boy through some agency of his own. I have told them that I have no sympathy with them and will have no dealings with them. I have suggested to do so by the Delaware and New York authorities, and that I will be accessory to nothing in the nature of compounding a felony."

The letter received from Jersey City by Dr. Marvin is signed "Richard Wilburton of Jersey City." One sentence in it is: "I know all about your boy and can get him back. If you believe the newspapers you will see from the father outside of the Atlantic Ocean. Don't say anything about this letter. I have no sympathy with them and will warn them that they are fooling with the wrong people. I want to do so by the Delaware and New York authorities rather than be an accessory to nothing in the nature of compounding a felony."

FIGHT OVER SMITH AS TRIAL RESUMES

NEW YORK, March 12.—James Clinch Smith, Stanford White's brother-in-law, was recalled to the stand at the resumption of the Thaw trial today and began Mr. Delmas' cross-examination in the witness chair. Mr. Delmas addressed the court on the subject of its discretion in regard to refusing to permit Jerome to be present.

"We should like to know," began Mr. Delmas, "just to what extent this witness is to be permitted to rebut—"

Justice Fitzgerald said:

"The District Attorney has a witness who will be produced when he pleases in this case in chief was presented. He claims that this witness testimony should be given in accordance with the usual procedure."

District Attorney Jerome referred to a conversation which he had with Clifford W. Harrington, Thaw's attorney of record, during the noon recess. In this talk the District Attorney had stated the early history of the case, including the flight of Thaw and the application for a writ of habeas corpus which was moved for before Recorder Goff in December. Jerome said that Goff asked Harrington to be called the events as he had recited them. Harrington agreed with the statement, adding except the summoning of witnesses, which he said had been arranged by the officers' staff in December to keep under surveillance those who were considered hostile to the prosecution.

Refused to Be Bound.

Mr. Delmas refused to be bound to any conversation Jerome had had with Hartridge, and the District Attorney then began to cite the events under discussion.

Hartridge is answering Jerome.

"This man Smith left New York immediately after the tragedy, and for some mysterious reason he looms up at this time. He had returned about November and was abroad again on Christmas day. If the District Attorney wanted him, he should have kept him under subpoena, as he did the other witnesses."

District Attorney Jerome said:

"Having been informed by a mutual friend of Mr. Smith whom I had met casually a year ago, that Mr. Smith said that Mr. Smith was in the city of New York, I found that he was not in the jurisdiction of this court, but in the vicinity. I sent word to Mr. Smith that it was a public duty for him to come to my office at his earliest convenience and off on the facts in his knowledge."

"The District Attorney moved this trial in the Supreme Court the very day I appeared with a motion for a commission to take depositions from witnesses in California and other distant points," said Hartridge in argument.

"Didn't Intend to Mislead."

Mr. Delmas asked what Mr. Jerome proposed to do in the matter, and for his request that the court exercise its discretion.

"I am extremely sorry that I am not as

USE U. S. SIGNS TO MOVE CARS

EXPLOSION IN TRENCH KILLS ONE, MAIMS 2

Hidden Dynamite Exploded by Blow from Workman's Pickaxe at Salem.

SALEM, March 12. By a dynamite explosion to-day in a trench in Pope court, where a new sewer is being laid, Timothy Cronin, a city laborer, was killed and Edward Gauthier and Michael McCue were injured, McCue so seriously that he is at the Salem Hospital in a semi-conscious condition.

McCue was standing fifty feet away from the trench watching the men at work. His face and body were terribly battered by flying stones.

While at work on the sewer, Cronin struck a dynamite cartridge, concealed in the earth. Immediately the terrific crash that could be heard for miles around followed. Cronin was blown to pieces, and the workmen below were showered with stones.

Gauthier, who was also standing a few feet from him, was knocked down by a big piece of rock, which struck him in the face.

The men in the trench, five feet below where Cronin was standing, escaped with only a scratch.

Street Commissioner Kelly, who had charge of the work, was notified, and he will investigate.

There will be a rigid investigation, during which the Boston & Maine watchmen will be closely questioned.

Cronin was forty-four years old and leaves a wife and five children, who live on Mason street, this city.

GIVES MORAN NEW EVIDENCE IN MOSES CASE

That new evidence has been discovered by Charles F. Moran, with ex-Treasurer Moses, the outcast ex-Governor of South Carolina, and Walter Whiting, of Palm Beach three months ago, was indicated by Assistant District Attorney Atherton Moran yesterday afternoon.

Assistant District Attorney only Single Officer Preston and State Detective Silas Smith appeared at the District Attorney's office in response to large advertisements that were found at Winthrop after the death of ex-Treasurer Moses.

At the time of the discovery of the body Moses' death was given out as a case of poisoning. The police made an investigation which they thought would be the solution of the District Attorney yesterday afternoon. Moran said that he thought that they did not consider the matter settled.

"I am not prepared to say what developments may be made," retorted Jerome.

"Then I will assume that Mr. Smith refused to come to your office," said Moran.

"I will assume that Mr. Smith is entitled to his own way about it," said Jerome, declared Mr. Delmas.

Jerome arose and presented an affidavit setting forth his reasons why the court should use its discretion in ordering or ruling out Smith's testimony.

Then the defense addressed itself to the justice's private chamber to argue the question, as it was not considered proper for the jury. A short recess was declared, during which the jury and the prisoner withdrew.

HOW 25 CENTS A WEEK KEPT 2 FROM STARVING

Widow Tells of Two Months' Fight Against Starvation—May Now Lose Mortgaged Home.

With pinched faces and weakened by a losing fight against hunger for over two months, during which they managed to exist on twenty-five cents a week, Mrs. Mary A. Scott and her son are now about to be turned into the street because of non-payment of interest on the mortgage on their home at No. 17 Kingman road, Somerville. Mrs. Scott, who is a widow, to-day tells her terrible story of privation.

By Mrs. Mary A. Scott.

Yes, it is true that my son and I have been living for over nine weeks on twenty-five cents a week. I have often read pitiful stories of mothers forced to listen to the cries of starving children, with only a crust in the house to offer them, but I never thought I would come to anything like this.

We have had but two meals a day, and these consisted principally of bread and tea. The bread cost us five cents a loaf, and we made it last for three meals. The tea my son secured as samples at stores in town on his weary tramps looking for work. By going to two or three stores he could get enough for one meal a day.

Bread and Water Three Days.

Sometimes I would go to the store and get a plut of beans for six cents. The next day I would bake them, and then I would try them for a change. In this way we managed to get along without asking charity.

For three days we were without tea and we had nothing but bread and water. The other day one of the neighbors sent in a dinner. When my son came home at noon after a tiresome tramp through the streets of Boston he had a nice, hot meal waiting for him. My, how we enjoyed that meal!

The next morning we took the last that had collected on the soup and used it for several meals. Then, before this, there were if anyone had told me that we would have to live that way I would have said they lied. I would have starved before I would have resorted to either.

There is nothing left in the house but a few crumbs of bread. There is not a cent to buy any more, but I am hopeful that John will be able to get something to do.

Every day for nine weeks he has been looking for work. He has been promised a job in the United States Agricultural Department as soon as the snow is off the ground, but as yet he has been unable to find one. There is $45 due on the second mortgage on $300, and yesterday a man came to the house and said that we must pay up or the street

"I don't care so much for myself, but I would like to do something for mother. It's hard on her. She isn't used to it. I have tried hard to keep the home clear for her sake. She has lived here for twenty-one years and wouldn't know what to do if she had to move. She is so good about it, and never utters a word of complaint and every morning when I start she has a word of good cheer and wishes me luck. I could last much longer things have got to turn before long.

"I am pretty much discouraged, for it seems as if the limit had been reached. To-day I am going to try my early and make a big try to get something to do for my sake. I have written the people who hold the mortgage and asked them to hold it for a while. If I can only get a steady job I know that I will pay them."

RANCH OWNER AND BROOKLINE BELLE MARRY

Society Gather for Nuptials of Miss Dickinson and William C. Marble.

In Harvard Church, Brookline, at noon to-day, Miss Jean Cowden Dickinson, adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Dickinson, and William Carey Marble of Los Angeles, a wealthy ranch owner, were married by Rev. Brooke Dickinson, brother of the bride. Miss Dickinson has been a social leader of prominence, and the marriage is the culmination of a romance.

Charming young women were selected by the bride to accompany her to the altar, Miss Harriet Berry of Hudson, N. Y., being the maid of honor, and Miss Barbara Kaufmann, Miss Olive Schwartz, Miss Helen Hay and Miss Ruth Woodward the bridesmaids. They wore pink chiffon over pink silk, and pink mallow picture hats.

John Marble, a brother of the groom, was honored with the office of best man. There were six ushers, classmates of the groom at Amherst.

Harvard church was prettily dressed for the wedding, being filled before the noon hour, society commenced to arrive.

The bride's father, William H. Cowden, pastor of the Third Universalist Society of Somerville, died a month ago this noon, assisted by Rev. Reuben Thomas, pastor of the Arlington Street Church.

It was while Mr. Marble was a student at Amherst and Miss Dickinson, home from school at Providence, was spending her vacation at the Dickinson Summer home in the college town, that the two were introduced.

After graduation Mr. Marble went to California for his health and established a large ranch. When he made a trip East the engagement was announced.

DOCTOR TELLS HOW SCALES WERE USED IN DEATH TESTS

AMAZING SCIENTIFIC POSSIBILITIES IN SOUL WEIGHING EXPERIMENTS

SCALES USED IN SOUL-WEIGHING AND DOCTOR WHO PLANNED TESTS.

Dorchester Cases Give Startling Evidence of Loss of Weight at Death.

The announcement of the discovery by physicians in Boston that the flight of the human soul from the body leaves the latter about an ounce lighter in weight, has aroused amazement in medical and religious circles.

The results of six experiments with three upon human beings about to pass into their eternal rest, have been previously stated in these columns, but the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day announces for the first time that the tests as to the physical properties of the soul hitherto only vaguely described even by the investigating practitioners themselves, were performed at the Cullis Free Home for Consumptives on Blue Hill avenue, Dorchester.

The medical world is astounded by the reports and theologians exult, while psychologists say that proof that the soul has weight would be one of the most wonderful discoveries of the world's history. Yet even such authorities on psychic research as Professor William James of Harvard call the reported conclusions "fantastic cranky ideas." The doctors involved, however, are of such standing that their veracity cannot be questioned.

It was Dr. Duncan MacDougall of Haverhill, who first received the inspiration which led to the experiments. Dr. John Sproul, then house physician at the Cullis home, procured the dying subjects for the delicate tests at the moment of dissolution. Dr. William Victor Grant of the visiting staff, and Dr. Harry Emmons of Jamaica Plain, then assistant house physician, were also associated with the two first-named doctors.

First Test Was Best.

Dr. Sproul now practices in Haverhill, and Dr. Grant in Lawrence.

"Of the six tests made, the first was the most conclusive," said Dr. Sproul to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter at Haverhill last night.

"It was at the Cullis home. The patient was a man named Churchill. He was about 45 years old, dying from tuberculosis.

"Though terribly emaciated—practically a skeleton—when he expired there was a variation in weight of fully an ounce.

"You understand, that in all these experiments we had the greatest difficulty in finding subjects of a face for the tests in every instance the dying person gave us full consent, knowing the object in view.

"It was the most sensational moment of my life. We had been watching Churchill's existence slowly ebb for five hours. There was a loss in weight of about one ounce per hour, accounted for by exhalation, perspiration, etc., so that we had to rebalance the scales every fifteen minutes with coins.

"The man rested on a spring cot bed, placed on delicately-adjusted scales. Dr. Sproul and Dr. Emmons were watching the scales and I the patient. Just at the moment of death, Churchill's face twisted. It was over. I said, 'He's dead,' and instantly there was a loss of weight.

"The beam of the scales clanged down so that you could hear it all over the room. It took two silver half dollars to counterbalance.

"I tell you this man's name, for he had no relatives. The others had, hence I may not reveal the identity of the patients.

Never Explained.

"As to the psychological or religious significance of these phenomena, I can only say that I believe they show something never explained. I don't say that the soul weighs an ounce, I tell you what we saw and learned. Nothing has been proved and the tests should be continued. Yet I'm afraid they may never be begun in this vicinity. Few hospitals will permit it.

"But I say to you, that any hospital that will give us the opportunity to have these experiments tried again will be well reimbursed.

"It was a serious research with all of us and the strain was fearful. We frequently were up all night conducting the tests. On one occasion Dr. MacDougall was away from home for four days, practically without sleep in all that time.

"Though there was a loss of weight in the tests on human beings, there was not the slightest in the case of thirteen dogs. The animals were put to death with curare, a drug, the action of which precludes all muscular motion. This would indicate that the soul has physical as well as psychical properties."

Dr. MacDougall's description of the experiments has already been detailed in the BOSTON AMERICAN. He to-day tells further of his conclusions and how he was led to make the psychical tests.

"There is really nothing proven yet," he said. "The research must continue exclusively to conclusively demonstrate that the soul has weight. Then in that safe are the papers containing the data of our experiments. Some day I hope to continue them.

"Though as far as I know, experiments of this nature have never previously been undertaken, literature contains suggestions along this line. In the early part of the last century Rudolph Wagner considered the disposal of the soul substance. One of the quarry family also wrote something on the subject. These treatises I had read in my research.

"In our first experiment, which gave the most positive results, the patient, a man, was five hours in a bed placed on scales so delicately balanced as to record a variation of less than one-tenth of an ounce.

"The subject was in as comfortable a position as on any other bed and receiving even more medical attention than would otherwise have been the case. We had carefully selected in Boston a fine pair of standard scales. A carpenter built a framework extending from the platform to above the upright position. On this rested the bearings and hospital cot, with the patient lying thereon.

"We chose the tightest subject possible—a man very emaciated from tuberculosis. He was practically moribund when placed on the scales, but was observed five hours before dissolution.

"At the moment of death the beam of the scales dropped with an audible stroke, and the loss in weight was shown to be three-fourths of an ounce.

"The six experiments made on human beings at the Cullis home and their results were as follows:

"Churchill, man of 45, dying of tuberculosis. Corpse weighed three-fourths of an ounce less after death.

"Man, tuberculosis patient. Loss of weight upon dissolution about an ounce.

"Heavy dark, of phlegmatic temperament, tuberculosis. No immediate change at final moment, but loss of nearly an ounce one minute after.

"Woman, died of diabetes. Weight variation on death of about one-half an ounce.

"Man, tuberculosis. Loss about an ounce.

"In the thirteen tests on dogs weighing from 15 to 70 pounds, there was absolutely no loss of weight as life departed.

Scales Clanged as Soul Took Flight.

IT was the most sensational moment of my life. We had been watching Churchill's existence slowly ebb for five hours. Just at the moment of death his face twisted. It was over. I said to Drs. MacDougall and Emmons, "He's dead."

And instantly the beam of the scales clanged down so that you could hear it all over the room. It took two silver half dollars to balance the scales.

HUB'S AUTO SHOW DECLARED BEST EVER HELD IN AMERICA

Sketched at Show by Boston American Staff Artist.

Thousands Throng Exhibition Halls—Every Prominent Manufacturer Represented—Commercial Vehicles a Feature.

By J. C. Kerrison.

THE auto show reigns supreme!

A year ago it was predicted that the motor boom had arrived in all its glory. Yet the interest exhibited at that time was slight as compared with the royal reception given motor vehicles since the opening of the two great buildings on Saturday night last.

Yesterday both halls were crowded to repletion, and the exercisers are being repeated today. Hardly an exhibit is there that does not attract an almost endless amount of attention. The visitors began pouring into both halls again as soon as the doors were opened to-day. It was a noticeable fact that upon their entry the majority of them went direct to some particular booth which had previously attracted their eye.

It was readily seen that the morning crowd came not to be seen but rather to see, and if possible make up their minds as to just what car they would purchase for their work of this season. In almost every instance these visitors displayed a thorough knowledge of mechanics as applied to the automobile; a knowledge which proves conclusively that the man who exhibited was well versed when regarding the merits of the different styles of transmission, engine, etc.

It was an exceptionally intelligent crowd, and the salesmen were forced to be alert on every point lest they make some statement in explaining this, that or the other feature of their particular car.

Three Big Racers There.

The most important piece of information which came to the surface last evening was the fact that William Hilliard will unquestionably drive a Thomas car in the next Vanderbilt cup contest. E. R. Thomas arrived at the show yesterday, and in the early evening at a dinner to a party of friends announced that he was to enter three cars for the Vanderbilt, and that in all likelihood Hilliard would drive one of the trio. This will give Boston a representative in the big international, and one worthy of the city and the position she occupies in the motor world. Hilliard is recognized as an exceptionally clever driver, a man who not only can get speed out of a car, but one who drives with his head as well as with the engine. Should he be selected as a member of the Thomas team he will unquestionably render a good account of himself.

And speaking about coming races brings to mind the fact that there are three big racing machines in the show, the Thomas, the Locomobile and the Matheson, the latter, it being remembered, being driven into a telegraph post in the last Vanderbilt. Mongini, the man who drove the powerful car, is at the show and can be found at the Matheson stand.

There is much in the exhibit that excites favorable comment. Costumes and machines are everywhere to be seen. There is as much of a radical departure in the former as in the latter, which is equivalent to saying that the manufacturer of automobile attire has clung pretty closely to well established lines.

Delayed Exhibits Arrive.

The number of six-cylinder cars to be seen shows an increase over the number found at the New York show and includes the Pilot, Peerless, Welch, Stevens-Duryea and Glide, the latter having arrived late yesterday. Several exhibits reached Boston yesterday, having been delayed en route. The Glide demonstrator was expected to arrive about noon to-day, she coming over the road from New York, while the Renshaw Motor Company is still looking for the major portion of its exhibit, which it lost somewhere between the factory and Boston. The Knox fire department car, which was sent from Buffalo to New York, arrived in Boston late last evening and was one of the very first of the cars to be taken into Horticultural Hall to-day.

The coming freight, which was captured by C. W. Kelsey in the last big run, and which was started from the Chicago exhibit, occupies a prominent position in the Maxwell-Briscoe booth, directly at the entrance to Machinery Hall. Here it attracts no end of attention. By the way, this company is about completing a plant in which it will be possible to turn out something like 18,000 cars annually. This shows the great magnitude to which the industry has grown.

New Car First Shown.

Of the seven distinct styles of White steamer which are on exhibition, one car has not been seen at any of the previous shows. This is the Model "H" 20-horse-power runabout, which arrived to-day and at once drew the attention of visitors because of its well thought-out lines and its attractive coloring. With this addition to the White exhibit, there are presented a range of styles which cover the requirements of many different classes of buyers.

The purchaser desiring a car of moderate size and power has a choice between the newly arrived runabout and the standard model "I" touring car, which follows closely the general lines of last year's car, with the addition of various improvements representing the year's progress in design. Should one favor the high-powered model "G," no less than five different styles of bodies are offered for selection.

First comes the racy looking runabout with rumble seat; then the touring body; then the handsome five-passenger Pullman body with revolving seats; and finally, the no less ultra in automobile luxury and comfort, the model "G" limousine sad extension landaulet.

The most startling and probably the most important betterment that has been brought forward this season for the benefit of the motorist is the wonderful ignition system seen at the show upon the Royal Tourist. This system provides for the use of a Sims-Bosch magneto and a storage battery, as desired, through one set of spark plugs only.

Can't Build Fast Enough.

This eliminates the idle, extra spark plugs, which invariably foul, and also does away with the cumbersome, intricate make-and-break system, which has always troubled users in causing trouble and annoyance.

"This will be a great season for automobiles," said E. R. Dodge, "and fortunate will be those successful in securing their cars, because there is hardly a factory in this country able to turn out cars fast enough. Cars are sold far in advance of the output, and the only ones to secure quick delivery will be those who understand the market conditions and get their orders in early. The Pope Company, no doubt, will lead the American factories in the output of new cars, but they find great difficulty in making a sufficient quantity of machines to meet their orders."

"The time has come when the buyers of high grade cars not only demand full value and efficiency, but also want to do any business till today. Anybody who asked me a question on the opening night got a circular. It was impossible to attempt to talk the merits of a car."

The Knox company was delayed in getting its big auto truck staged, but it holds a prominent space now at Horticultural hall.

If you need an observation car with

Everybody stops to take a look at the big auto water sprinkler which is conspicuous in the Atlas exhibit. It's a harbinger of what to expect on the streets in not many years to come.

The biggest steam launch ever on exhibition can be seen at Horticultural hall, and its immensity causes the spectator to gasp as he enters the building. It was constructed by the well known South Boston yacht builders, Murry & Tregurtha.

"I'm glad that Saturday night crush is over," said one dealer. "I did not try to do any business till today. Anybody who asked me a question on the opening night got a circular. It was impossible to attempt to talk the merits of a car."

The Knox company was delayed in getting its big auto truck staged, but it holds a prominent space now at Horticultural hall.

If you need an observation car with ross of seats ranging in number from half a dozen to as many as you want, just look over the Rapid line. There is more attention given to this type of commercial car than any previous year.

That's a great display of the commercial product that E. P. Blake, the New England distributor of the Logan, has presented. A two and a half ton truck and light delivery wagon are traction vehicles demanding close inspection by all who see the possibilities of the power propelled business.

Away from gaudy decorations that go a great ways in enhancing the general appearance of an exhibit, the Apperson Bros. need nothing to accentuate the general attractiveness of their display in Horticultural hall. Two big touring cars and a high powered runabout, all in coloring to catch the eye, and the trio of machines are in position to examine them thoroughly from all sides.

NEWEST WRINKLES FOR WOMEN MOTORISTS SEEN AT AUTO BIG SHOW

Sheepskin Gloves the Rage.

Sheepskin gloves are the rage this season. They are made to match the suits and robes in all colors. With long gauntlets, they keep out the tiniest atom of dust as the car whirls over the road.

Amber-colored glass is found in almost all the imported goggles this season. This subdued color is much easier for the eyes than the staring white glass in vogue earlier in the days of motor culture. Goggles are said to a hundred different styles and shapes. They are usually imported from Europe.

In the motor world fur coats are a necessity in some weathers. Long tours in the early Spring and Autumn can be comfortable and filled with pleasure only when the passenger is clad up to the chin in a fine coat of fur. These coats are made of goatskin and dogskin and are practically everlasting. Quite a choice is given in these coats on exhibition at the show.

Provision for Chauffeur.

But if owners and their friends are to be fitted out for trips on the road, so also must be the chauffeur. Therefore, the exhibit of chauffeur outfits is sure to attract attention. Suits of dark overcoatin of light weight are popular in the Summer time, as trips in the evening. They are warm and yet not too warm for comfort.

No motor enthusiast is fully attired without the all-important veil, and here is a world of colors and designs to greet the eye. The latest veil is one which can be buttoned to the coat and take the place of a hood. It is absolutely dust-proof.

A decidedly popular hat among the latest designs is a soft-brimmed headpiece. Many of these hats are in solid colors and others in Highland plaids. With the brim turned up rakishly, Mikell makes a pretty picture. Ladies' hats are to be had in cravenette, silk rubber and straw, and in every case any match the suit.

When miladi rings up her chauffeur she has already prepared herself for an hour or two on the smooth roads of the park. Nothing has been forgotten in the rush. She is equipped to the last small item of dress. So with her lord and master; he is ready for any condition of weather. So the chauffeur, as is the car itself. And Jordan Marsh company seeks to prevent all that men and women can desire before they pull over the lever and bound away.

What a variety of choice in flowing coats and veils is shown! Long, loose coats of all colors, from the sober gray to the Highland plaids are to be had in the popular silk rubber. These coats, stylish, dressy, are also rainproof. Beautiful coats of imported English burbury are very popular this season.

Leather Trimmings on Coats.

Leather trimmings on collar, cuffs and seams, as protection against exigencies of the weather, are shown on many of the latest coats. Then there are the common ponnee and mosair coats for ladies and gentlemen.

The very latest in ladies' coats in a long sweater made in dark gray trimmed with red. This will be much worn this Summer on trips in the evening. They are warm and yet not too warm for comfort.

EQUIPMENT BOOTH FEATURE OF SHOW

To ride in the cing-chugging motor car these days requires certain indispensable equipment, and a full line of just what the equipment should be is shown in a booth at the Auto Show.

NOTES OF BOSTON'S GREAT AUTO SHOW

See the commercial cars at Horticultural hall. That's the place to study the latest creations of the vehicles of industry and there is a great assortment there.

Something new in the motor line is the two-cycle revolving engine of the Bailey car. It's a marvel of engineering skill and the only motor of it's kind used for auto purposes. The demonstrators are kept constantly busy answering technicalities concerning the revolving power.

Percy Williams, a familiar member of the trade, is pushing the qualities of the Atlas cars at Horticultural hall.

LAME BACK.

Lame back is only one of many symptoms of kidney trouble. Other symptoms, showing that you need Swamp-Root, are being obliged to pass water often during the day and to get up many times during the night, inability to hold your urine, smarting or irritation in passing, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, catarrh of the bladder, uric acid, occasional headache, dizziness, poor digestion, sleeplessness, nervousness, sometimes the heart acts badly, rheumatism, bloating, irritability, wornout feeling, lack of ambition, loss of flesh, sallow complexion.

If your water when allowed to remain undisturbed in a glass or bottle for twenty-four hours, forms a sediment or settling, or has a cloudy appearance, it is also evidence that your kidneys and bladder need immediate attention.

In taking Swamp-Root you afford natural help to Nature, for Swamp-Root is the most perfect healer and gentle aid to the kidneys that has yet been discovered.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

SPECIAL NOTE.—In order to prove the wonderful merits of Swamp-Root you may have a sample bottle and a book of valuable information, both sent absolutely free by mail. The book contains many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women who found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy they needed. The value and success of Swamp-Root are so well known that you are advised to send for a sample bottle. In sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure to say you read this generous offer in the Boston Daily American. The genuineness of this offer is guaranteed.

American Locomotive Motor Car

It Is French—It Is American.

Built Here of Imported Metals.

This HUB cap is not a special feature for Boston. It is the distinguishing mark on all Berliet cars. Bostonians do have a special advantage though, because of our factory being at Providence. We insist upon Berliet buyers being satisfied. Your car will be overhauled, without charge, at the end of the first year.

You have the guarantee of a $50,000,000 company.

OLCOTT BACK IN FINE NEW SONG FEAST

Popular Irish Comedian Adds to His Laurels at Boston Theatre.

OTHER SHOWS IN TOWN

Like good wine, it seems that Chauncey Olcott, the Irish comedian, improves with age. At any rate, he has made rapid strides in his work as an actor in the last few years, while his voice is just as full of melody as ever. This year's play, "Eileen Asthore," which the Olcott brought to the Boston Theatre last night, is so much punctuated with songs from the favorite tenor that it is more like a musical comedy than the comedy-drama which Mr. Olcott has for years chosen to be. However, the public goes to hear Olcott sing rather than with the expectation of seeing a good play. This time, however, they get both.

NOVELLI GIVES NEW IDEA OF OTHELLO

Standards of excellence long cherished by the theatergoer must pass if the palm is to be awarded to Signor Novelli for his presentation of Othello as given last night at the Majestic Theatre. Novelli, as Othello, is a Moorish tiger. He grimaces, rolls his eyes, spreads his hands, chuckles rudely, guffaws, leers. He is not a Venetian truly.

But when the poison of jealousy enters into his soul, then he is great. All facade crumbles and his shows in his eye and the shrug of his shoulder.

For an Italian actor Novelli, Signor Ferrati's lago will not be equalled in many a long day. He played with his general sinister with a mouse. His mobile features, expressive fingers and slender legs are used to their full extent to show just how evil a man can be and still be a man.

MANY CHANGES TAKE PLACE AT THEATRES

Robert Mantell triumphed over himself last evening. He played Hamlet at the Tremont Theatre, in a stage version prepared from John Booth's prompt book, and when he first appeared he created an unfavorable impression. He neither looked nor acted the part. His face was "made up" peculiarly, and he seemed to be afflicted with a physical infirmity that was real torture. But after the first act his Hamlet was ideal.

To-night Mr. Mantell plays lago in "Othello" for the only time here.

With a dash and a dazzle "The Grand Mogul" entered upon another week at the Colonial Theatre last evening. Frank Pixley and Gaston Lodrec have given all the public taste in the matter of comic opera offering.

When a musical comedy gets to its second month in Boston it must possess an unusual amount of merit, and that is the case with "The Little Cherub," which is now in its fifth week at the Park Theatre. There was a splendid audience there last evening.

Maxine Elliott's final week at the Hollis Street Theatre this season opened most auspiciously last evening, for there was a large audience in attendance when the curtain arose upon "Her Great Match."

Paradoxical situations follow one another in rapid succession in the plot of "An American Citizen," the offering at the Castle Square Theatre this week. The play is Madeleine Lucette Ryley's best. The experiences which she has ordained for her characters kept two audiences in continuous laughter yesterday.

Hoyt's "A Trip to Chinatown," somewhat readjusted to John Craig and his company of players, but bright and snappy as ever, was revived at the Bijou Theatre last night and will be played to-day and to-morrow. Then, for the balance of the week, it will give way to a double bill, "Prince Carl" and "A Tragedy Rehearsed." This is the last week of John Craig and his company at the Bijou.

One of the big features on the bill at the Orpheum Theatre this week is the musical feast provided by Miss May Boley and her Polly Girls, who made such a hit in this city last season. Mr. and Mrs. Hon and Truesdell in "Two Men and a Bottle," Almazo, who does a juggling act that is an eye-opener; the Crane brothers, in a new act called "The Mutineers"; Bert and Billy Van, the blackface comedian; Lowell and Lowell, in a comedian-impossible act; O'Brien and Buckley and Werden and Gladdish are strong features of the unusually good bill.

Abounding in thrilling situations, and filled with startling and dramatic climaxes that keep the feelings of the spectators at concert pitch throughout the whole four acts, "Secret Service Sam," this week's attraction at the Grand Opera House, scored a decided success at its first performance last night. Charles T. Aldrich, as Sam Peterson, the detective hero, made a decided hit.

The letters of the alphabet inclining the programme numbers at Keiths' this week race neck and neck for precedence. R. A. Roberts, in his "Dick Turpin" playlet, in which he is the sole agent of the characters, holds over. Clifton Crawford, monologist; Edith Helena; the six Mowatts, club swingers; Theresa Rena, with her two horses, are but a few of the many acts.

"Miss New York, Jr.," accompanied by a small army of fair maids, who are experts in military evolutions, and assisted in many other directions, leads off in the fun-making at the Old Howard this week. Charlie Burkhardt added new laurels to his fame in "The Adventures of Mr. Lashinsky." Revers and Yule were clever trick provokers, also the Eddie Mazier Four, Berg and Rene Vedmar in "Beauty and the Beast." make a hit.

Park Square Roller Skating Rink continues to grow in patronage, as roller skating is just now a popular craze. Wednesday evening there will be a basketball game between Harvard Dental and Rockwell Hill Schools, and on Friday another big professional race.

Howell Hansel, as the young lawyer named Hunter of the Hunter bill, proved himself a worthy successor of Nat Good, who in the role.

"Ten Nights in a Bar-room," with Carrie Nation in the play, crowded the Bowdoin Square theatre yesterday afternoon and evening the fact that the public evinces regard for the play. She is no doubt responsible for the interest in the play, as she loses no time in expressing her peculiar views and has a rather graphic way of emphasizing them, by swinging her little hatchet.

There is no liveliest kind of a continuous entertainment of burlesque and vaudeville at the Palace this week. The travelling company is the High Rollers, which appears in two lively burlesques, entitled "Oh, What a Night," and "School Days." Both pieces are full of good comedy.

Dave Marion, who is responsible for the book and lyrics of "Rossland," the burlesque of the Rossland Beacon, which had better than he knew, for the entertainment is the best seen at the Columbia this season, not even excepting "Wine, Woman and Song," and "The Empire" shows. It is not a one-man show by any means, for every one in the company is kept busy. Pretty Aggie Behler led most effectively.

From start to finish the Bachelor Club Burlesquers, headed by Harry Hastings and Vivia Sheldon, at the Howard Athenæum this week, present one of the liveliest performances seen there this season. The chorus is comely and the costuming effects above the average. Tom Cogne.

Effie Lorraine, the female Houdini who defies locks, bolts and bars, entertained more thousands with her feats yesterday at Austin & Stone's Museum. Nothing seems too difficult for her. Last night she escaped from a huge dry goods crate which had been securely fastened with sixteen-penny nails and ropes.

SPOILSMEN AWAIT SENATE'S ANSWER

Shall the inspectors of the Massachusetts Railroad Commission, the men who figure into the causes of accidents and perform like duties, be exempt from Civil Service laws?

The Massachusetts House of Representatives has said "yes" to the question, which to-day was presented to the Senate. All the spoilsmen of State politics wait for the answer with bated breath and much confidence.

It has been said, and it has not been denied, that one of the purposes of the bill is to make a place for Henry W. Scott, a Republican. He grimaced and gritted terms a member of the House. Seward last year served on the Committee on Rules which gave the immunity bath. Turtle objected and also a member of the committee.

Turtle told the Public Service Committee that he knew Seward to be a candidate for the place.

Chairman Jackson of the Railroad Commission says his board approves of the bill.

Commission Backs Down.

The Civil Service Commission, which raised the issue that resulted in the Turtle bill, has backed down. "It isn't worth fight," they say, in effect; "we don't care what the Legislature does about it."

Another queer thing about the mix-up is that the Civil Service method of appointing these Railroad Commission inspectors has never had a trial. The inspectors, now four in number, have heretofore been appointed by the Railroad Commission without reference to anything like a Civil Service list of eligibles.

It was not until New Year's Day that the Civil Service Commission decided to sit up and take notice of the agitation begun by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. On that day the Civil Service Commission came to the conclusion that inspectors of the Railroad Commission would stand in the same light as other inspectors, all placed by the laws under their jurisdiction.

They notified the Railroad Commission not to appoint any more inspectors without consulting them.

Mr. Turtle's bill went to the Legislature two weeks afterward. It was duly referred to the Public Service Committee. Senator Winfield S. Schuster of Worcester, County woolen manufacturer, is chairman of that committee. In the room, however, there is no one to push up for the bill except its author. Turtle set Pittsfield, who started long enough to have his say and then hurried away without listening to the remonstrants.

4,000 Railroad Men Protest.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, 2,000 strong in Massachusetts, prayed this Public Service Committee to report the Turtle bill adversely. They begged the committee to give the Civil Service plan a trial.

The Order of Railway Conductors made similar presentation. The Order of Railway Conductors has a membership of about 2,000 in the State.

The Massachusetts Civil Service Reform League also urged a "trial."

And the Public Service Committee reported that the Turtle bill "ought to pass."

Substitute New Bill.

The railroaders made a yell, which was finally heard so far as the Governor's room.

Then Mr. Turtle substituted a "new" bill for it, or the same old bill in a new form. His new bill exempts Railroad Commission inspectors from the Civil Service test unless the Civil Service Commission shall "thereafter, with the approval of the Governor and Council, decide that these inspectors should be classified."

The insiders say it's a safe betting that the bill will sail along to the Senate, and that by some time in the afternoon will shortly get a swell job on the staff of the Railroad Commission.

"The passage of such an act would be a crime against the best interests of the travelling public," says John E. Miller, author of "Railroads, Their Employes and the Public."

The public will do well to watch this legislation.

TO ENFORCE THE LAWS.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 12.—In a speech before the Indiana Legislature yesterday Vice President Fairbanks said that present national laws will be enforced to prevent wicked combinations of capital.

TURKS WEAVE FINE RUGS AT SIEGEL STORE

The skilled but lowborn labor of weaving Oriental rugs, performed by two native Turks, may be seen daily on the third floor of the Henry Siegel Company's emporium. Barsam Bayeutz, the head weaver, a native of Constantinople, who speaks several languages fluently and is an expert at his vocation, to-day began a demonstration of that art. Constantinople, who speaks several languages fluently and is an expert at his vocation, to-day began a demonstration of that art. Constantinople was spoken several languages fluently and is an expert at his vocation, to-day began a demonstration of that art. Constantinople was spoken several languages fluently and is an expert at his vocation, to-day began a demonstration of that art. He has been in this country many years, but his assistant, Dardanus Mouhan, can not speak a word of English. The exhibition of weaving will continue two or three weeks and is free to the public.

All the work is by hand, from the warp to the completion of the rug. Every square inch of rug there are from 250 to 500 knots, and in a place like there are these knots. The loom is a Turkish importation, and the yarn is also Turkish, dyed with pure vegetable dyes.

The Henry Siegel Company has thousands of dollars worth of these fine Oriental weavings arriving every nearly every steamer, purchased by its agents, who are selective in Constantinople, Smyrna and Tiflis. The rugs are secured from the looms in the heart of Persia by native collectors, at times 1,500 miles from the nearest shipping point.

Curators, of other rug stands, bring them to the railroad, taking at least three months for the trip. Many of the dry season only by night, because of the sun's heat by day.

The Henry Siegel Company is determined to maintain its reputation for the finest Persian and other Oriental rugs and, together with the output of its looms in this country, America, is enabled to show a line of rugs unsurpassed in the country.

EX-PRESIDENT OF FRANCE DIES

PARIS, March 12.—Jean Paul Pierre Casimir-Perier, former President of France, is dead.

M. Casimir-Perier's public career was practically ceased with the advancement of the third republic. Born in Paris in 1847, he served with distinction in the Franco-Prussian War, winning selection to the Legion of Honor.

THE LATEST FAD--MONOGRAM COMBS

SOME OF THE NEW STYLES IN MONOGRAM COMBS FROM PICTURES POSED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN

THE very newest fad of all for Boston girls is the monogram comb.

Monograms have been used in decorating nearly every article of feminine apparel, but until just now the comb has not been utilized.

Some of the combs used are high and wide in empire style, others have curved lines, while still others are made with large medallions upon the central one of which appears the single initial or monogram.

These combs are adaptable to all shades of hair and all styles of coiffures.

The grande dame with her high coiffure will wear a wide and high empire style close up and supporting her coils and puffs.

The girl with her hair dressed simply and low will fasten among its waves the medallion or curved top style, but all will have in gold leaf the wearer's initial or monogram in large letters.

The effect is extremely pretty, the gilt letters showing up in fine contrast with the shell of the comb.

To be strictly in the fashion you must possess one of these novelties.

Be Dignified and Modest and You'll Not Lack Respect

By Beatrice Fairfax

GIRLS, the minute your employer, superintendent or any man in authority over you shows signs of treating you in any other than a purely business-like manner put a stop to his attentions at once.

If often happens that young people employed in the same office will grow to care for each other, but the courting should be done after office hours.

The office is for business only, and demonstrations of affection are out of place and in bad taste.

Perhaps you feel a little bit flattered if your employer singles you out for favors. Don't let your vanity run away with your head, my dear. Those attentions bode you no good.

If he persists and persecutes you with his attentions, give up your position. It is better to lose your position than your reputation.

His Motive

'TIS a rule, your employer is a married man, and even if he is single he has no idea of asking you to marry him.

He simply realizes that you are an attractive, pretty girl, and he wants to enjoy a passing flirtation with you.

And that is just where you must put your foot down and reject his advances absolutely. Any girl can make a man see that his attentions are objectionable and if he is a decent man at all he will cease them. But, of course, there are always exceptions, and it is those exceptions that you must beware of.

Dignity, modesty and self-control are very necessary qualities in the girl who respects herself.

Expect Rebuff

MEN are quick to recognize the girls whom they must treat with respect. Any ventures that they make to do otherwise are purely experimental, and they quite expect the rebuff they are sure to get.

If you are flippant over the telephone and make eyes at every man who enters the office you cannot expect the men with whom you work to have a very high opinion of you.

Accept no invitations to dine or go to any place of amusement with your employer. He would not think of allowing his daughter to go about with a married man. Why should he not treat you with just as much respect?

Handy Things for Housewives to Know

FOR a nervous headache a flannel bandage—that is to say, allow as little as possible—dipped in hot water and wrung out, placed first on the temples and then on the back of the head at the base of the brain is sure to give relief.

If a pimple or boil will not come to a head apply cloths that have been dipped in hot water.

For bronchial trouble, if common baking soda is blown through a glass tube into the throat it will be found effective.

After cutting a corn peroxide should always be applied to prevent any possibility of blood poisoning.

To cure dandruff, after washing and drying the hair part it and apply vaseline to the scalp; but do not allow it to get on the hair. Leave on all night and then shampoo with tepid water and white castile soap.

If there is trouble of any kind with the eyes a wash of either cold tea or new milk is good.

For a sore mouth try a wash of one teaspoonful of peroxide in a half glass of water.

Earache will be relieved if a few drops of heated sweet oil, into which the same quantity of laudanum has been put, are poured in the aching ear, but care must be taken not to get the oil too hot, and sometimes it is difficult to get a child to keep still long enough to do this.

In that case try dipping a piece of medicated cotton in the heated oil and putting that in the ear, but be sure to have the piece sufficiently large that it can be easily taken out.

A few drops of camphor taken on a lump of sugar at the first intimation of a cold will often break it up.

HOW TO MANAGE A HUSBAND

After All, Men Are Only Human Beings; So Women Ought Not to Expect Them to Be Too Angelic

EVERY woman thinks her husband is entirely her own, and one of the most sharpened pains that result from failing in love is when she discovers that there has been a loss—no matter how slight, of the marriage vow.

How sorrow and rage riot in her nature and strive for mastery! Feelings of revenge fill her heart, and a mad desire to hope. The years before her seem intolerable. But they may be very happy years if she will pull herself together and face the situation boldly.

Not many men are angelic, few are even fairly faithful, and it would be weird if all of the forty marry, would endeavor to realize that a man is merely a human being and not a faithful angel.

On the main he is a very good fellow, but he may have one or two weaknesses which she "I'll set him know!" treatment will not cure.

Men say that they never know how to take a woman. The wise woman who means to come out on top knows that all men are very much alike.

Each one of them resents being dictated to or found fault with. He is willing to do what he is told to do, but he does not like to be predominant spoil your comradeship, as is so often done.

If you think you have come to the end of your tether, indulge in tears and threats. Do not metaphorically wave your marriage lines in the face of your husband and tell him your rights. Order a man to do a thing and you grows his bulldog.

The malarity of men who work have a deep-seated aversion for the wife at home, in their eyes she is different from all other women.

Of course, it would be much better if for a husband, and don't look for an angel.

Strive your hardest to be tolerant with your human nature. Keep your temper and hide your rime. One day he will realize that the game's not good enough.

Never let your relations get strained. It may be shy and awkward in making up after a scene, and woman only adds to her pains.

Man, on the whole, is a right down good sort. So be content with a human being and don't look for an angel.

SPICED BEEF

BOIL a large salt of beef until tender; pick meat to pieces and crush gristle; that is very fine and fine; set the stock; remove fat. Boil fine eight or ten crackers and add to meat. Season with pepper, cloves, minced parsley, nutmeg and cinnamon. Cover with stock; place on stove and let come to a boil. Pack in deep dish and cut slices when cold.

HARD BOILED EGG

THERE is such a difference between hard boiled eggs that it seems necessary to give a method, as many dishes call for hard boiled eggs. Put the eggs into warm water; bring slowly to 200 degrees Fahrenheit and keep them at this temperature for thirty minutes. When done lift and drop them quickly into cold water and remove the shells. This prevents the discoloration of the egg from discoloration. If eggs are dropped into boiling water and boiled rapidly for two minutes it is true they will be hard, but the whites will be tough and indigestible, the yolks will be mealy on the outside, tough in the center and almost as indigestible as the whites.

Box No. 85, Pittsfield, Me.

SNOW PUDDING

SOAK quarter box gelatine in quarter cup of cold water until very soft, add one cup boiling water, juice and grated rind of one lemon, juice and one cup sugar. When dissolved, set away to cool. After the jelly has begun to set or stiffen, add the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs and beat until very light and foamy, and allow it to harden. Use custard sauce with this.

CUSTARD SAUCE.

Beat together four tablespoons sugar, a pinch of salt and the yolks of three eggs and add to one pint of scalding milk, cook together until like a very thick cream. When cold, flavor with a dash of vanilla.

"THE BRACEBRIDGE DIAMONDS,

Or, The Heart of a Woman"

By Gregory Townsend

CHAPTER LVI.

Married

ON a certain afternoon in the second week of the following June she came to church regularly for six months and brought her husband and soon with her. Leave them to be, Isaac. That is a troublesome visit to some people. But I've such news for you, Isaac. I wonder could you guess?

"I'm too used up to make the effort, Sarah," the minister said. "Perhaps when I've got something to eat and have had a rest—I've ridden over twenty miles, you see—I may be more fitted to deal with this important matter."

"Well, I'll not give you the trouble. Sylvia Thurston was married this day week to Carl Mueller. Her cousin gave me the news to-day. I met her as I was driving back from Cleveland."

Resentment

"You don't tell me so, Sarah!"

The minister had dismounted and just then Shamel appeared and led away his horse.

"No wonder you are surprised. I was inclined to be a bit offended at first, Isaac, and Mrs. Thurston was that, and she has vowed to explain that the marriage was, of course, perfectly private, and that Sylvia had expressly forbidden her to mention it to any one until it was all over."

"But where were they married?"

"In some small church in New York city, I believe. The whole affair was very quiet. The bride's cousin and friend were the only guests present and Sylvia's own maid was the only attendant. Then they will come to live at The Hollow."

"Well, I think they might have made an exception in our favor at least, Sarah, and told us the news beforehand," the minister said in rather an injured tone. "I don't think they treated us very kindly, I must say."

"I thought the same, but Mrs. Thurston evidently is not to blame in the least. don't believe even Sylvia knew when the marriage was to take place so soon, though Carl had agreed for almost a month after it once from Mooreombe for town. She and Carl returned home only last night."

"Well, I'm sure I hope they will be very happy, Sarah," the minister said after a pause. "I suppose this privacy in the matter was owing to the fact of Sylvia's being in mourning for her brother. It's rather soon after Raoul Thurston's death but then, perhaps, it was just as well to clinch matters. Carl Mueller must love the girl to be has proved it, and he is a wealthy man. Mrs. Prosser must be very dangerous. So I daresay they've acted for the best."

Yet, although he could thus generously treat the subject, the minister bore a grudge against a slight sense of resentment that he could not overcome for many days on the day of Sylvia's marriage. He had always believed, as a matter of course, that the privilege would have been his.

An inward pang shot into his mild blue eyes, and his lips quivered a little, almost like a child's endeavoring to restrain an outburst of tears.

In Mueller's Power

"The poor Thurstons! They are altogether, you see, in Mueller's hands, and I daresay he it was who arranged everything, Isaac," Mrs. Prosser hastened to say. Long years had taught her to read her husband's face like an open book.

"They haven't got against his wishes, I am certain, in the slightest way. By all accounts he has been of very material advantage to them since the engagement to Sylvia. I've been told, on excellent authority, that he settled with Traxton and Jones about the heavy mortgage on the Mooreombe property last Winter."

"I sincerely hope that is true, and, if it is, he must be a first-rate fellow, and I shall always feel a friendly interest in him," the minister said, completely overcoming his temporary weakness and after a few moments he resumed: "I should be more sorry than words could express, Sarah, to see the Thurstons go to the wall. They don't deserve it. They are a family, even if they have been a bit improvident, in the past."

"I like them all except Basil Thurston," Mrs. Prosser said, thinking of some long bygone recollection. "I must say I've not had much reason to care particularly for him."

"Oh, well, he was not quite responsible for his acts and words at the time you allude to, my dear. Basil was by no means a bad fellow at heart. I've seen many good points about him. He may have been a bit of a rough diamond, but, if so, the diamond was there all the time, no matter how thick the crust may have been. How very extraordinary about Basil's prolonged absence, Sarah! I wonder what is the real truth of the matter?"

"The last time I touched upon the subject to Rose, about a month ago, she took it so very badly that I decided not to repeat the experiment. I'm going up to Redleow to-morrow afternoon and I may possibly find her in a more communicative mood."

In this expectation, if expectation it was, Mrs. Prosser was disappointed. When she arrived at the lone moorland house on the following afternoon and entered the drawing room of Redleow she knew at once that her eyes were preternaturally sharp, that Rose Thurston was in no mood just then for confidential disclosure.

Old News!

Rose had risen from her lounge as Mrs. Prosser was announced. She looked wan and fragile, and there were dark circles under her eyes.

"Now, Rose, dear, you really must remain on that lounge, as usual," Mrs. Prosser said. "I know how you like beautiful repose. You should be out on the garden seat, my dear."

"I never seem to wish to go out, somehow," Rose returned, with a fleeting smile. "Aunt Letty scolds me continually for 'moping indoors,' as she calls it. She has gone over to Mooreombe this afternoon. We heard by chance to-day that Mrs. Thurston has returned from New York."

"Oh, then, you've heard the news, of course? Mrs. Prosser said, with a distinct feeling of disappointment. She always wished to be the first in the field with such announcements.

"Heard? What news do you mean, Mrs. Prosser?"

"About Sylvia's marrige. Is it possible you have not heard it, Rose? Why, she was married to Carl Mueller on Saturday week—quite a private marriage. Nobody seems to have known anything about it, not even Godfrey Thurston himself, until the day before the marriage."

"Sylvia married!" Rose said, with a little gasp in her voice. Instantly her thoughts flew to Basil, and a pang passed through her heart.

Mrs. Prosser hastened to recapitulate the circumstances so far as she had related them to Rose, and it was not until her voluble sentences had run themselves out to the last word that she seemed to realize how very white and tired Rose Thurston looked, and how listless she had become her attention to the long-winded story.

"I've succeeded in worrying you to death, dear, poor Rose," Mrs. Prosser exclaimed, rising to take her departure. "I cannot imagine what has come over me, I'm sure. Now, remember no to Miss Letitia. And you must not worry and fret, my dear. Basil is a few hours of to-morrow—if he has any sense—will be at your doors."

Cruel Awakening

With this parting advice the minister's wife vanished, and Rose a minute later beheld her jolting down the hilly drive in her pony phaeton. With a heavy sigh Rose returned to her lounge. Mrs. Prosser's words had agitated her cruelly, awakening as they did all the old memories of Basil's almost lifelong devotion to Sylvia, who was now, indeed, lost to him forever.

And as Rose Thurston's sad thoughts thus went back over bygone recollections the tears welled to her eyes and fell one by one over her wan cheeks, and she felt almost too listless and weary to brush them away.

Sylvia was still occupied thus when Miss Letitia Small, sedate and imposing in a black silk mantle and an ostrich feather bonnet, entered the room and subsided into her favorite armchair with a sigh of exhaustion.

"I am very tired, my dear. I am really too old for these visits. I must begin to remember that I am eighty-six, and that it is high time for me to draw the line at afternoon calls!"

Although she was endeavoring to talk lightly, Rose's keen perceptions told her that her aunt was uneasy about something or other and was, for reasons of her own, refraining from looking her niece in the face.

"Mrs. Prosser has been here, Aunt Letty. She has told me of Sylvia's marriage. Of course, you have heard the news at Mooreombe?"

A Busybody

Rose endeavored to talk carelessly, knowing very well what was passing through her grandaunt's mind at the moment and wishing to set her at ease; but the tremor in Rose's voice could not be concealed, and Miss Letitia, glancing suddenly at her, saw the traces of tears upon her cheeks.

"I knew this news would upset you, dear. Of course, I've heard it from Mildred Thurston, but I did not intend to tell you just yet. I wish that woman would not be such a tattling busybody! Whenever she comes here she is sure to have some unpleasant news to tell. Rose, you've been crying. This is really too bad, darling."

"Oh, no, help it, Aunt Letty. The news of Sylvia's marriage brought back to me the memories of Basil—and the days gone by."

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

MUCH WISER TO WAIT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I met a gentleman about a year ago through flirting and he seems to pay a lot of attention to me. He called several times at the house to see me. He asked me for my company, but I told him it was too short an acquaintance, but if he would wait until we knew one another better I would give him more of an answer. He tells me that he is all alone and would like to get a home of his own. He also asked if I cared enough for him.

I certainly do, but I am not going to tell him. I want to know him better before I show him I love him, although every time I see him he tells me how much he loves me.

Now, would you advise me to keep on his company or tell him I don't want to see him again? I feel a little backward in going how we made our acquaintance, but I think in time to come I will forget all that.

R. R.

I THINK you are much wiser to wait until you know the man better before you become engaged. You get him in an irregular way, and though, in your case, things have turned out all right there are grave risks in forming acquaintances in that manner. It is much better to be formally introduced. I trust that things will turn out happily for you.

TOMORROW'S BEST BARGAINS IN BOSTON'S BIG STORES

KEEP up the good work and pick up the bargains that are scattered about for your benefit.

They seem to grow better

I better each day until one wonders how the shops can afford to give them.

Below will be found a list for your assistance in your Wednesday shopping:

GEORGE E. PLUMMER will out on sale a small lot of tourist coats in light and dark effects for only $5.95. These are reduced from $7.50, $10 and $12.50. They are lined throughout and are a most suitable garment for traveling purposes.

HOUGHTON & DUTTON CO. announce a special price of 69 cents per pair for their 75 cent white cotton lisle curtains, made in two styles of tucks with 1½-inch hemstitching on ruffle. These are 3½ yards long and this bargain price is for to-morrow only.

MACDONNELL'S Tremont Temple store offer about 200 yards of very fine German val. lace ruching at the extremely low price of 5 cents a yard; an excellent ruching to buy, for it can easily be washed. This price is for Wednesday only. Legal stamps as usual.

SHEPARD NORWELL CO. will make embroidered flouncing a special bargain attraction to-morrow, offering in ten different styles colors of 50-cent value, special price 25 cents.

STARR'S will have a rare bargain in an all-wool worsted skirt, in modish black and blue, with graduated ground bottom with three wide folds of black taffeta silk; an excellent special for Wednesday, $3.75.

R. H. WHITE, in their toilet ware department, offer Lion's 25-cent tooth powder for 10 cents, and 25-cent Amolin toilet powder for 17 cents. Also Williams' 25-cent shaving sticks for men at 12 cents.

SCHUMACO CO. will have a timely bargain in ladies' and misses' double coats and vests, some fur lined. The regular prices of these goods range from $35 to $75. You can purchase one of these to-morrow for $7, $10, $14 and $20. This lot is limited, so early selection is advisable. These garments are very correct garments for exhibition purposes and are splendid values.

TIMOTHY SMITH CO. offer for 22 cents each auto cotton blankets, size 10-4 size, very soft and downy, especially suitable for children's beds and for summer use. Their 98-cent wash boilers, with cupboard bottom, for 49 cents each are among the bargains to please housewives. These are in No. 8 and 9 sizes, and every boiler is warranted not to leak.

DODGE-SPEAR CO., among other unusual bargains in their shoe department, are selling women's $3.50 box calf shoes for $2.48.

W. H. BRINE CO., on their street floor, offer the regular 50-cent quality dimity-silk cross ribbon selling with sale today for 25 cents a yard; these are in brown and grey only. Their 15-cent baby Irish edging insertion to match will be 11 cents, and they will also have ladies' 25-cent purse hair bone for 19 cents to-morrow.

JAMES A. HOUSTON CO. are offering their 75-cent taffeta ribbon for 59 cents a yard. This is a lightweight fabric, all pure wool, soft and silky, drapes beautifully and is a rich jet black, forty-two inches wide.

Bob on War Path.

"FRIDAY, the 13th, I thought, as much. If Bob has started, there will be hell, but I will see what I can do."

The sound of my voice, as I dropped the receiver, seemed to me to part the mists of five years and usher me into the world of Then, as though it had never passed on.

I had been sitting in my office, lifting the tape slide through my fingers while its every yard spelled "panic" in a constantly rising voice, when they told me that Brownley, on the floor of the Exchange, wanted me at the phone and "quick." Brownley was our junior partner and floor man. He talked with a rush. Stock Exchange men in panics never let their speech bobble.

The Only Hope.

"Mr. Randolph, it's sizzling over here, and it's getting hotter every second. It's Bob—that is evident to all. If he keeps up this pace for twenty minutes longer, the sulphur will overflow the Street and go into the lands and into the country, and a man can tell how much territory will be burned over by to-morrow. The boys have egged me to ask you to throw yourself into the breach and stay him. They agree you are the only hope now.

"Are you sure, Fred, that this is Bob's work? I asked. 'Have you seen him?'

"Yes; I have just come from his office, and glad I was to get out. He's on the warpath, Mr. Randolph—uglier than I ever saw him. The last time I saw Bob loose was child's play to his mood today. Mother sent me word this morning that she saw last night the spell was coming. He had been up to see her and sisters, and mother thought from his tone he was about to disappear again. When she told me of his mood, and I remembered the day, I was afraid he might seek his west here.

"Also I heard of his being about town till long after midnight. The minute I opened his office door this morning I flew at me like a panther. I told him I had only dropped in on my rounds for an order, as there were opening off eight cases and I didn't know but he might like to pick up some bargains. Bargains! he roared, don't you know the days? Don't you know it is Friday the 13th? Go back to that hell-pit and sell, sell, sell, sell what and how much you're asked. Anything, everything. Give the thieves every share they will take, and more, if they only take any more, ram as much again down their throats until they spit up all they have been buying for the last three months.'

"Going out I met Jim Holliday and Frank Sears coming in. They are frightfully excoming Bob's orders, and have been peddling Anti-Pewjack out for him. I guess they will be on the floor again in a few minutes, so I thought I'd safer call you before I started to sell. Mr. Randolph, they cannot take much more of anything like here, and if I began to throw stocks over it will bring the gavel inside of two minutes, and that will be to announce a dozen failures.

"It's yet twenty minutes to one, and God only knows what will happen before then. It's up to you, Mr. Randolph, to do something, and unless I am out of my wind you haven't many minutes to lose."

Millions Crumble

It was then I dropped the receiver with "I thought as much." As I had been fingering the tape, watching five and ten million crumbling from one to another in a few minutes, I was sure this was the work of Bob Brownley. No one else in all Wall street had the power, the nerve and the deviltish cruelty to do things that had been ripped during the last twenty odd minutes.

The night before I had passed Bob in the theatre lobby. I gave him one hearty nod and saw the look of which I of all men best knew the meaning. His eyes, his brown eyes were set on space; the outer corners of the hammered muscles were drawn hard and tense as though weighted.

As I met my wife with him it was impossible to follow him, but when I got home I called up his home and his clubs, intending to ask him to run up and smoke a cigar with me, but could learn not a word. I tried again in the morning with out success. Then when just before noon he came began to jump and flash and snarl I remembered Bob's ugly mood and did it purposely.

Fred Brownley was Bob's second cousin, brother, twelve years his junior. He had been with Randolph & Randolph from the day he left college, and for over a year had been our most trusted stock exchange man.

Bob Brownley, when himself, was as fond of his "big brother," as he called him, as his beautiful Southern mother was of both, but when the devil had possession of Bob—and his option during the past five years had been frequent—neither mother—mother and brother had to take their place with all the rest of the world, for then Bob knew no kindred, no friends. All the while world was to him during these periods a jungle peopled with savage animals and reptiles to hunt and fight and tear and kill.

It is hardly necessary for me to explain who Randolph & Randolph are. For more than sixty years the name has spoken for itself in every part of the world where dollar-making machines are installed. No old colts in a long grass Kentucky paddock, no old roan in a Texas cattle range, no old salt in a Cape Cod fishing village, no old hand in a Maine lumber camp, no old timer in a Montana mine, no old stager in a Wall street office, but knows the name Randolph & Randolph as well as he knows his own.

Randolph & Randolph's business is the financing of railroads, and every nation when entering the market for loans knows that the favor of the foremost American bankers in something within must be reckoned with.

I pride myself that at forty-two, at the end of the ten years I have had the helm of Randolph & Randolph, I have done much to change our great name my father and uncle created, but something to add to its sterling reputation for honest dealing, fearless, old-fashioned methods, and all-round integrity. Brantree's and Randolph's are the agencies six in reporting Randolph & Randolph. Fifty millions and dge ward: credit unlimited."

I can take but small praise for this, for the report was absent the same the day I left college and came to the office to "learn the business." But, as the survivor of my great father and uncle, I can say and Make as my witness, that Randolph & Randolph have never loaned a dollar of their millions at over legal rates, 6 per cent per annum, have never added to their board by any but fair, square business methods, and that slight of brighter, freshfaced banker just setting to find a lodging place beneath the old black-and-gold sign that before and under nailed up with their own hand, over the entrance.

Leaves Harvard

Nineteen years ago I was graduated from Harvard. My classmate and chum, Bob Brownley of Richmond, Va., was graduated with me. He was about my age, but I had married that. We had been four years together at Phi Psi's previous to entering Harvard. No girl and lover were fonder than we of each other.

My people had money, and to spare, and Bob's was a hard-headed, Northern horse sense.

The Brownleys were poor as church mice, but they had the brilliant, virile blood of the old southern aristocrat and the romantic, "salaam-to-no-one" Dixie-land spirit of twenty-five years ago, when throwing daughters and a small son dependent upon his sister.

Many a warm Summer's afternoon, as Bob and I strolled over the Charles, and often on a cold, crispy night as we sat in my sleeping room at the Red Coat, have we watched up for our future. I was to have the law practice of my father, making the business of Randolph & Randolph, and Bob was especially to represent the father's firm on the floor of the Stock Exchange.

"I'd die in a day," Bob would say, "and the floor of the Stock Exchange is not the country place I'm cut out for to take to." So when our college days were over and we had shed our gowns we began the wall in his office, and tried us up his new shingle to see if we both were fitted. said, Jim, you and Bob have chosen well. Bob, Jim pays you the privilege to step into my shoes, and Bob is cut to a thirty-second and six-foot in one and pay back the seat price, and then make a pile for myself as you felt later like giving me another chance to come into the firm, then I should not be taxing myself open to the charge of being a mere pensioner on your friendship.

"You know what I mean, sir, and won't thing I am fixed with any long-down gribe. But if you will let me have the price of a stock exchange seat on my note and will give me the chance, when I get the hang of the floor, to handle some of the firm's orders, I shall be just as much beholden to you and Bob, and shall prove a lot better myself.

"I know what Bob means; so did father, and we were glad enough to do what he asked, father holding my note and the seat price in the form of a present, after explaining to us that a foundation stock exchange rule prohibited an applicant from borrowing the seat price.

Four years after Bob Brownley entered the firm's service I paid back the first of forty thousand, with interest, and not only had a ring for himself to his credit on Randolph & Randolph's books, but was sending home six thousand a year, while living up to, as he jokingly put it, "an honest man's notch." I may say, in passing, that a Wall Street man's notch would make better six thousand yearly earnings cast an uncertain shadow at Christmas time.

Bob was the favorite of the Exchange as he had been of the set at school and at college, and had his hands full of business three hundred days in the year. Besides Randolph & Randolph's clientele commissions, he had the commission orders of some of the heavy plunging cliques.

I had just passed my thirty-second birthday when my kind and father suddenly died. For the previous six years I had been getting ready for such an event; that is, we had grown accustomed to hearing my failing health.

"Jim, don't let any grass grow in getting the hang of every branch of our business, so that when anything happens to me there will be no disturbance in "the Street" in regard to Randolph & Randolph's affairs. I want you to be ready as soon as possible that after I am gone our business will run as it always has.

"So I will work you into my directorships in those companies where we have interests and gradually put you into my different trusteeships."

Thus at father's death there was not a ripple in our affairs, and none of the stocks known as "The Randolphs" suffered a point because of that, as the financial world, mentions event. I inherited all of father's fortune other than four millions, which he divided up among relatives and charities, and took command of a business that gave me an income of two millions and a half a year.

Once more I legged Bob to come into the firm.

"Not yet, Jim," he replied. "I've got my sea and about a hundred thousand capital, and I want to feel that I'm in a stick my heels until I have raked together my own million all of my own making. then I'll settle down with you, old man, and hold my handle of the plough, and if some good gift happens along about that time—well, then it will be "An Ivy-covered little cot for mine."

He laughed, and I laughed, too. Bob was looked upon by all his friends as a bad case of nonability. No woman, young or old, who had in any way crossed Bob's orbit but had felt that fascination, delicious to all women, in the presence of

but he never seemed to see it.

As my wife—for I had been three years married and had two children—Randolphs to show that both Katherine Blair and I knew what marriage was for—never tired of saying, "Poor Bob! He's womanblind, and it looks as though he would never get his sight in that direction."

Then again, Jim," he continued in a tone of great seriousness, "there's a little secret I have never let on much you but. The truth is I am not safe yet—not safe to speak for the full future of Randolph & Randolph.

"Yes, you may laugh—you who are, and always have been, as staunch and steady as the old bridge that runs from New York, though he had more land and slaves than he could use, stake his land and slaves—yes, and grandaughters, too—on a card game, and—lose, and change the whole face of the Brownley destiny—those same gambling morosses are in my blood, and when they begin to rise and grow I want to do something, and, Jim—and the big brown eyes suddenly grew wistful—if those allcruises ever get unleashed, there'll be nobody to pay the piper—except there will be Bob's handsome head was thrown back—his thin nostrils dilated as though they were in the keen breath of conflict. The lips were drawn across the white teeth with just part enough to show their edges, and in the depths of the eyes was a darkred blaze that somehow gave the impression one gets in looking down some long avenue of black at a bonfire built a hundred thousandrounds a curve at night.

Twice before, when back in our college days, I had had a peep at this gambling hungers of Bob's—once in a poker game in our rooms, when a crowd of New York classmates had called for a game with us and by the sheer weight of coin.

And again at the Derby House at New London on the eve of a varsity boat race, when a big crowd shook a big pile of money and taunts at Bob until with a yell he left his usually well-ordered feet and frightened me, whose allowance was dollars to his pounds, at the sum total of the bet-cards he signed before he cleared the room of Yale money and came to me with a white face screaming with cold perspiration.

These events had passed out of my mem ory as the ordinary student breaks that any hot-blooded youth is liable to make in his undergraduate days, but I knew that day, while he tried to tell me that the business of Randolph & Randolph would not be safe in his keeping, I had to admit to myself that I was proud to have him with me.

I had regarded my self college chum not only as the best mentally harnessed man I had ever met, but I gave him as the soul of honor, that honor of the old story books, and I could not conceive of anything tempted to jeopardize unfairly the rights or property of another. I had come to trust him with me to let Bob have his way, and I did not want him to come into our firm as a full partner.

Five years later, during which time affairs, business and social had been slipping along with no hint of the evil that could have asked, I was preparing for another trip abroad, and had just returned from the time had now come for him to help me in earnest, when a most disagreeable—one of those unaccountable incidents that God sometimes sends to remind us of the lifepaths of His children, paths heretofore as straight and fair-roadwidths as highways along which one has never to look twice—came to me, transforming one of those events that, looked at retrospectively, appear to have been predestined.

It was a beautiful July Saturday noon in Bob and I had just "squared off" for the day preparatory to joining Mrs. Randolph on a yacht that was lying tempted to the Newport. As we stepped out of the office door I noticed a handsome, that a lady had come in and had parties waiting to see Mr. Randolph.

"Who the deuce can she be, coming in at this hour?" I asked of Bob, as all who men are in a rush to shake the best out of business before the week-end, after all outcome?" growled Bob. Then he said, "Know her, Jim?"

Another minute and he had his answer. Mr. Brownley, probably well enough for me to place me, of the Judge Lee Sands's" asked Bob, as he held out his hand.

"I am Beulah Sands, of Sands Landing, Virginia. Your people know our people, Mr. Brownley, probably well enough for

BOB UNGLAUB LOOKS STRONGER ON FIRST BASE THAN GRIMSHAW

BY A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Staff Correspondent of the Boston American.

A. H. C. Mitchell, Baseball Expert for the Boston American.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 12.—Another game between the regulars and the Yannigans is on the card for this afternoon and some more prime fun is sure to be seen. These contests are for blood, if the first one counts for anything. Never has the Boston team been so forward at this time of year, and never have the men shown more spirit than they are now showing.

Parent and Grimshaw got their first dose of baseball of the year and both were there in good style. It is true that Grimshaw looks second class beside the game Unglaub is putting up, but of course one must make allowance for Grim's hard spell of training. However, when all is said and done, I cannot recall when Grim ever showed as much baseball as Unglaub is allowing us to gaze upon at Little Rock.

The former utility man is playing the bag in a way that the other men never has been able to close. To-day it all up, Unglaub is cheating the ball to beat the band. These dispatches have already dwelt on the great improvement in his batting. He hunts well and can bang them on the nose with the best of the batters here. His average in the first game yesterday was .500, and this included a corking three-bagger.

There are few men playing ball who understand the game better from all standpoints than Robert. He goes about his business in a straightforward manner and it is "play ball" with him all the time. He has no time for "piddling."

Coaching of Stahl Probes Feature.

A feature in the game yesterday was the coaching of Stahl. Boston fans hardly know the sound of his voice, but if any of the faithful had been here when the manager was on first base the they would have heard a loud, deep voice that gave encouragement to the batter and made the base runner feel that there was somebody watching him closely. It was the most satisfactory game between regulars and youngsters I have ever seen. For to-day's contest there are four pitchers who have not yet been used, namely, Tannehill, Glaze, Ralling and Killian. The latter, however, has a lame arm which is sure to be bone and he may not be asked to go in.

A native of Pine Bluff, forty-seven miles below here, Sam Hilsheim by name, called on President Taylor and made a proposition for a game between the Pine Bluff and Little Rock teams, to be played at Pine Bluff any time next week. He offered the entire receipts to the two teams and promised a free trolley car for the players and rooters. Taylor, after talking with Manager Stahl, decided to accept the proposition, and the game was fixed for Wednesday, March 20. The Little Rock team will report for practice on the seventeenth, and they will have, of course, only a few days to get in shape to meet the Boston, but Manager Stahl is anxious to play, so he will be accommodated.

There promises to be quite a delegation from rooters from here that will go down to see the game. The Boston club will only carry about twelve men, the others being left behind to take their position on the local grounds.

Most of the newspaper men will leave in a few days to join the Boston Nationals, but I shall stay here, as the team is doing so well that there is sure to be a lot of interest in its progress.

Players Are Racehorses This Year.

Denny Sullivan lost his money and jewelry in the hotel this morning, but was fortunate in being able to recover them intact. It would be a sad affair for a ball player to lose his spare cash at this stage of the game, as the first pay does not come until May 1.

The weather is again mild and Springlike and the ball players are just reveling in it. Freddy Parent and old Grim are doing the groom act this morning. It will be four days before they work out on their surfaces. Bain says he is looking splendidly. Parent, especially being pretty near fighting weight. It will be a team of racehorses and not earthworms this year for the Huntington avenue grounds.

It would do the hearts of the fans good to see the boys cavorting around the park. Outsiders are barred. Only the players and newspaper men are allowed on the grounds, so the players can out up all they like without fear of offending anybody.

They are certainly a frisky lot, and if everything goes right Boston will have nothing to be ashamed of in the way of an American League ball team when the championship race begins.

FAST ROSEBEN AFTER CARTER PRIZE AGAIN

D. C. Johnson's record-breaking sprinter Roseben is again a candidate for the $10,000 Carter Handicap, week's handicap, for once which he nearly lost a year ago because he was not quite up to the mark of condition.

Roseben will this year be opposed by more three-year-olds of high class than those which ran in the race last year. The Messrs. Paul and Roy Rainey have entered Ivo Mund and Horace E., as well as the older horses, Sir Wilfred and Heslip. J. C. Core and McCarney are the three-year-old entries from the Newcastle stable, and from James R. Keene's track are entered Superman, Philander, Caleboh and Zombezi, all three years old.

Pieper a Good Coach.

The undergraduates are greatly interested in this new system of a semi-professional graduate coach, as every man on the team has already been coached under Pieper while handling the Cornell freshman teams in the last three years. He had exceptional success with the freshmen and invariably broke even the second over the Yale freshmen.

With Lewis, Harvey, Currier and McCall, the infield will be the same as that which faced Yale last year. In addition to these men Captain Dexter has Briggs and Paine, of last year's freshman team, who have been doing exceptional work in practice in the Soldiers' Field cage.

Captain Dexter, Simons and Pounds, all members of varsity experience, are trying for their old berths, and from present indications the trio will have to do some hustling to beat out the new aspirants for positions.

The problem confronting Pieper now is to find some good pitchers. The men available for this position are Greene, Brennan, Lincoln, Slater, Hartford and Bond. Of this sextet Greene is the only one who has had any considerable experience on the varsity. His curves are good and he has plenty of speed.

Hartford a Comer.

Hartford is looked upon as a comer, and if he can gain any degree of confidence in his ability he will easily make good. "Dan" Brennan, the old Cambridge Latin School twirler, is now eligible for the nine, and he has lots of speed, control and headwork. He has not done any work since his freshman year on account of scholarship technicalities, but he is now free and will make a strong bid for the job of pitching the Ellis and Tigers.

Slater, Lincoln, Bond and Wendell are showing up strong on the receiving end, with Currier as the favorite. He did splendid work last Spring and has next call for the place.

Harvard wants a strong hitting team, but every effort is being made to develop both sluggers and leaders. Pieper was a heavy hitter himself, and he is teaching every man his own method at the bat.

HARVARD LIKELY TO BE STRONG ON DIAMOND

With last year's infield intact, three veteran outfielders trying for their old berths and a host of fine material for the battery positions and possible vacancies, Harvard's outlook in baseball is considered the best in years.

The wearers of the crimson did not retain Yale's championship in baseball last Spring, and from now on Captain Dexter and the coaching department will make a mighty effort to win back the lost laurels.

In obtaining Louis Pieper as head coach, Captain Dexter has been particularly fortunate in his selection, as Pieper is a graduate of Harvard, and has had lots of experience with semi-professional nines. He was unable to make the varsity during his college career, owing to the eligibility rule barring professionals, but he made his class team and coached three freshman nines.

N. E. LEAGUE TO COMPLETE LIST OF GAMES TODAY

PARKER MEETS SAM ANDERSON

By far the most interesting wrestling bout so far arranged by the management of the Columbia Theatre is that scheduled to night between Harvey Parker of Brockton and Sam Anderson of Norwood. Both men are now heavyweights, but the outcome was unsatisfactory. To night's match will decide which is really the better man. Their first meeting took place in Norwood about two months ago, and Parker got his man on the mat in fifty-nine minutes; the time was called for the second bout, and when the men were struggling for a few minutes Anderson got a hold on Parker that put the Brockton man to the bad for a couple of months. Two falls were smashed, and Parker got the bout. Tonight Parker intends to lose no time in winning back his laurels, and will go after his man right at the call of time, but to Anderson he has a man who is confident that he can beat Parker at his own game, and a bout for hours will be the result.

ROUSE AND BALDWIN BOX DRAW

Special to the Boston American.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 12.—At the end of fifteen rounds of fast fighting the match between Rouse O'Brien of South Boston and Matty Baldwin of Charlestown was declared a draw by Referee Stanton Abbott at the Thornton A. C. to-night. This is the second time the boys have met in a battle of the same distance and with the same result.

Baldwin was a hot favorite before the bout started and 10 to 8 was freely bet on his chances. It went to 10 to 6 and then O'Brien supporters wanted 2 to 1.

It was O'Brien who put up the last and pluckiest good end of the fighting and was many grades better than when he defeated the Hunker Hill boy. The Rhode Island fans had seen him batter Kid Goodman to pieces with the use of his deadly left hand and they expected to see him do the same to Baldwin, and he came near repeating, as he rarely cut Baldwin up a bit, especially in the face, but was against tougher game.

For seven rounds Baldwin was in front a shade by his aggressiveness, and only O'Brien's superior cleverness kept him out of trouble.

When half the distance was covered the South Boston boy was sent in to do execution and before the end came he was begging pare with Baldwin and outpointing him by a noticeable margin.

A draw was a fair decision to both boys and it was all to O'Brien's credit that he held his own and his performance banned his fighting stock at the expense of his rival.

Such shiftiness as O'Brien displayed excited the fans of their feet. Time and again when he was cornered by Baldwin, and Matty thought he had a line on his jaw, O'Brien slipped out and escaped.

It was O'Brien's snappy left which stood in Baldwin's way to victory as he received stinging bumps flush on his face and mouth and iced freely. Several times Baldwin and O'Brien in a corner and laid on rights and lefts to the head and landed with effect, but failed to slow up the Peninsula boy, as he went at a rattling pace in the last half-dozen rounds. While Baldwin fought with both hands, O'Brien rarely used his right, saving it entirely to cover his jaw, but when he cut loose he let it go but without any effect.

The special train from Boston brought down eighty-two sports with delegations from Charlestown and South Boston.

In the semi-final Billy Glover of South Boston stopped Jimmy Ryan of Roxbury in a round.

'CHERUBS' AGAIN THE WINNERS

Mollie Montrose won her sixth race at New Orleans yesterday, and the members of the "Little Cherub" company at the Park Theatre are happy again.

Hattie Williams, who plays the part of Mollie Montrose in the pleasing play, had a good play down, and all the company took the tip, and, although the odds were short, made a little "supper money."

HARVARD CREW OUT ON CHARLES

A good showing was made by the Harvard varsity crew in its first row of the season on the Charles River yesterday afternoon. Two members of the 1906 freshman crew, Severance and Faulker, were taken into the varsity boat and give promise of developing into good men. Barnard, who has not rowed for two years on the Morgan, Tappan, Fish, Glass and Bacon of last year's eight, were also out for practice.

Richardson, who hurt his leg playing hockey, is expected to be working with the varsity men in a few days. Lott, of last year's freshman crew, and who was taken to England with the varsity last Summer, was relegated to the second crew, but it is thought he will be put in the varsity boat soon.

BURLINGTON, Vt., March 11.—Karakanoff, the Turkish wrestler, will meet Hialmar Lundin for a purse of $500 in Strouse's Theatre, Friday night.

DOVEY AND TENNEY PLEASED WITH TEAM

WEST BADEN, March 12.—Both President Dovey and Manager Tenney were much pleased with the way things went yesterday, when the Boston National players had their first day's practice of the season. Yesterday the men arose at seven o'clock and went to the bottle works and drank lots of hot mineral water, after which they repaired to the gymnasium, where they remained until about ten o'clock when they went back to the hotel and had a hearty breakfast. An hour's rest was enjoyed and then some more light practice was indulged in. Of course the practice for the rest of the week will gradually become more hardy, but the routine given above will practically be followed.

The men were all sore in their joints today from the work yesterday. Every member of the squad was complaining of tired muscles, but by the end of the week everyone will be limbered up, and the work then will not be minded by the men.

WORK ON IMPROVING SOUTH END GROUNDS IS NOW UNDER WAY

Work on improving the South End grounds has begun. Carpenters are now at work on the new fence, which will extend along the railroad side of the grounds, and across centre field to the bleachers. When this work is finished the bleachers will be repaired, and probably a roof put over the one first-class one now on the field.

The Walpole street fence will be rebuilt and the new fence will be of entrance mode. The dirty coal sheds will be torn down and the grass and soil will be thoroughly done over, and a trolley retiring room, new quarters for the ushers, a new office and a ladies retiring room will be furnished. The quarters for both the home and visiting teams will be furnished, and the Boston players' room will be equipped with all the baths and will be furnished with electricity. A hot water heating plant will be put in, and for the visiting team will be provided for in almost the same manner as that of the home team.

CHANCE TO ENTER LEAGUE.

Amateur baseball teams desiring to enter a league, kindly send their names and addresses to F. W. Johnson, Marlboro, Mass., at once, as a meeting shall be called on Thursday. Would like to hear from teams in Quincy, Allston, Everett, Reading, Somerville and Dedham cannot especially. Many of the leading teams have entered but there is still room for a few live ones.

'B. A. A. TEAM OFF FOR NEW YORK

With Billy Eaton, the sprinting wonder missing, the B. A. A. track team left for New York this morning, where they take part in the New York A. C. games to-night. The men to go were W. W. Coe, Bob Leavitt, Ellery H. Clark, Herbert Gildey and Athletic Manager Brown.

SPORTING NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

BASEBALL.

Harry Bay of Cleveland says he is willing to meet any batter in either of the major leagues in a 100-yard match race. The Cleveland players have a proposition to back their collective cash.

There may be a shortage of water at the ball park next year, for the Pirates are themselves being around there for a few days.

McGraw has ordered under the straits of long years on the ball field. He has become part owner of a Newark gold mine.

Mike Donlin is sore because Joe Cantillon's signatures are on the National League list of players once said that Mike never takes a drink before a game.

Manager Watkins likes college players on his team. He has signed Lefty Leifield, a former star pitcher from Cornell, and Lefty Schulz, a Yale man.

Ned Hanlon says that the old Boston baseball team was the best batting club ever seen in the game. That team consisted of Bennett, Gannel and Brodie, Duffies, Werden, Conway, Radbourn, Nichols, Pickering, Bloomfield, first base; Dunlap, second; Long, third; Richardson, left field; Ned Hanlon, center field, and Sam Bonnerson, right.

Fred Beebe, the St. Louis National League pitcher, who was signed by Manager Chance of the Cubs, has been released to Waterloo, Ia., where Charley Lewis, a diminutive Portuguese, is manager. Fred has designs on Lewis, and before the St. Louis pitcher knew what had happened the ball struck him on the nose and he knocked him out on the floor of the gymnasium.

Umpire Hildebrand, an excellent judge of players, said not long ago that Pettz was the greatest pitcher that ever broke into the game. Wagner is undoubtedly a correct judgment, and yet when Pettz was in the game he was not the star that he is now. Pettz has improved with years, and has been unable to come to terms. Pettz is now on his farm.

BOXING.

Kid Barrett, the Holy Cross heavyweight, will be matched with Young Patterson at one of the Maine fighting resorts.

Sam Mayers, the New York lightweight, is to have another battle with Young Corbett, and this time he has not time to lose.

Billy Papke is matched for Joe Walcott and Billy Stanley for Frank Mantell engagements at Salida.

A well-known Boston boxer has been matched a number of times for a fight, but has never been pitted. He intended running this afternoon, but was unable to do so. He has been a big improvement on the present plan of fighting in Boston.

Hugh Dougherty, who is to box Young Corbett, has practically nothing to his credit. Morgan Brown has defeated him in three fights, and Corbett defeated him Friday night.

Mike Donlin, the Baltimore boxer, has placed himself under the management of Harry Crane, the Boston boxing promoter, and will make his debut in the ring with enough confidence in O'Toole to back him against anybody in the business, who will box 126-128 pounds.

Good News for Farmers and the Nation

Farmers Produce the Nation's Wealth. The Prosperity of the Nation Depends on the Farmer

(Reprinted from the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN)

This country should follow with interest the recent movements throughout the country originated and carried on by the farmers of the United States. Such movements have been widespread, intelligently thought out. They have produced admirable results already, and they promise wonderful results in the future.

Our readers in the city realize, of course, that national prosperity depends upon the farmers more than upon any other class of our people.

The mechanic making the soil's products commercially available is the good servant of the people.

The business man planning wide distribution of national wealth is also the nation's useful, indispensable servant.

But the farmer, who actually takes from the ground its wealth—the man who ACTUALLY FEEDS THE NATION—IS THE WORKER TO WHOM THE COUNTRY OWES THE MOST.

In the past the farmer has been the most poorly rewarded in proportion to his services. Legislation, instead of working for him, has worked too often against him. Protection has added a great deal to his bills without adding much to his income. He has been ground down that the railroads might pay dividends on their thirteen billions of securities, more than half water.

In the cities mechanics, by close unions, have bettered themselves.

In business circles the business men, by close attention to trade interests and to protection, have protected themselves.

The few great heads of corporations, intelligently co-operating, have accumulated their hundreds of millions, thanks largely to the farmer. AND MEANWHILE THE FARMER, WORKING IN ISOLATION, AT THE MERCY OF LABOR CONDITIONS, AND TARIFF CONDITIONS, AND RAILROAD CONDITIONS, HAS STRUGGLED ALONG UNAPPRECIATED, WITHOUT HIS FAIR SHARE OF THE NATION'S WEALTH.

Voltaire, almost at the end of his eighty-four years of brave and useful life, wrote to a friend in Paris from Ferney that his principal claim as a man was in the fact that he had cultivated a part of the earth intelligently and caused it to produce good crops.

Every farmer who cultivates honestly and intelligently a part of the earth's surface, producing food for other human beings, has obeyed practically in the labor of his arms and the sweat of his brow the fundamental command of the Christian religion. He has helped other men. He has fed other men's children.

It is time for the farmer to help himself; we are glad that he has found that out, and that the work has been begun throughout the country intelligently and determinedly.

Formerly, the various efforts of the farmers were aimed at protecting themselves from too flagrant robbery. And their efforts were not very effective. They tried in a small way to fight the trust in binding-twine, the trust in agricultural implements. But those trusts prospered and the farmers did not.

Now the farmers have gone about the thing in the right way. THEY ARE COMBINING TO COMPEL THE PAYMENT TO THEMSELVES OF A FAIR PRICE FOR THEIR PRODUCTS.

They are determined, and justly determined, that what the PEOPLE pay for the products of the farm THE FARMERS SHALL RECEIVE.

They are tired of selling their wheat for one price, to see a speculator retail it to the public for fifty per cent. more.

They are tired of picking their cotton and turning it over to gamblers that bid up the price, tax the manufacturer, rob the millhand and do the farmer no good.

The farmers have begun to unite to protect themselves against oppression by the trusts that exploit them—but the Railroad Trust especially—that weigh on their backs, taking a half a day's labor from every horse, half the product of every cow and field.

The extension of this farmers' movement is important to the whole nation, because it means GREATER WEALTH AND PROSPERITY FOR THE WHOLE NATION.

We have millions upon millions of acres lying idle, and thousands of millions only indifferently cultivated, BECAUSE THE FARMER HAS NOT HAD A DECENT REWARD.

The wealth of the country depends on what the farmers of the country bring out of the ground.

No imagination can exaggerate the addition to the wealth of this country which would result from full, honest pay to farmers for the work that they do.

The acre that produces $5 of profit to the ill-treated farmer will produce $50 or $100 where the farmer, well-treated, is able to treat his land proportionately well.

Good pay for mechanics has always been advocated by this newspaper, because it means distribution of money among business men, and increase of general prosperity.

Good pay, fair treatment, added wealth for the farmers are more important than anything else:

Because the farmer does more than DISTRIBUTE wealth, he actually CREATES it.

This newspaper, printed in five great American cities, has millions of readers in the cities and millions in the country. We hope soon to see these readers of city and of country united—united for the benefit both of city and of country.

The city's prosperity reflects the prosperity of the country round about.

The farmers' prosperity depends, of course, upon the capacity of the great crowd in the city to buy and pay well.

A union offensive and defensive between the honest American workers of the soil, the factory and the business office—a union against exploitation of the many by the few—will mean such real prosperity as has never been seen in this country or in any other.

The farmers alone, to whom we extend our earnest wishes for the success of their organizations, will add billions annually to the actual wealth of this nation as soon as they persuade the trusts to get off their backs; as soon as they get for themselves a fair price for what they produce; as soon as they have the money to treat a generous soil generously.

The Whole Truth About the London Municipal Situation

The Council, before the polls were closed, has taken one of several considerations, but has never wavered from the idea of converting the public utilities from private to public ownership, and we may be perfectly sure that no matter who may be elected time shall not continue to roll on. The reason for this is because the whole English nation is irreversibly committed to the public ownership idea. It has nationalized its telegraph service, is now engaged in nationalizing its telephone service and is preparing for the day when it will nationalize its railroad service.

In England it is not necessary to convince people that a nation can exist without being robbed; they believe that already in England they have no faith in the sanctity of loot. They do not believe that the robberies of an express company have divine warrant, and they think that a community to the time when the investments will begin to return profits; and at the election they most naturally voted against the party that had caused the enhanced burden.

That was all there was to the London election. Municipal ownership had nothing to do with the increased taxes and was not in any sense at stake in the contest.

But municipal ownership has surprises of London, like those of other English cities, are admirably managed in the public interest, most of them are successful as business concerns, and the people have repeatedly shown their entire satisfaction with them.

If you were to go to London a year from now you would find more municipal ownership than you will find now, and if you were to go there again two years from now you would find still more—because the English people know when they have had enough, and they made up their minds some time ago that they had enough of pilfering by the private corporations.

Little Editorials from the People

SOMETHING TO LEARN

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

It is a pleasure to read your great editorials. What you said in last night's editorial on Copenhagen you can say of about all large cities in northwestern Europe. There is a class of Americans that don't think any good can come from Europe because there are a few Kings yet left there. America can to good advantage copy lots of things from the old countries, as President Roosevelt said the other day in his message on government coal mines, etc.

Hope you will keep up your good work in spite of ignorant and selfish opposition.

HERE in the heart of the world
Here in the noise and the din;
Here where our spirits were hurled
To battle with sorrow and sin—
This is the place and the spot
For knowledge of infinite things;
This is the kingdom where thought
Can conquer the prowess of kings.

WAIT for no heavenly life.
Seek for no temple alone;
Here in the midst of the strife
Know what the sages have known—
Earth is one chamber of heaven,
Death is no grander than birth;
Joy in the life that is given—
Strive for perfection on earth.

SEE what the Perfect One saw—
God in the depth of each soul,
God as the Light and the Law,
God as beginning and goal.
Stand not aloof of the sport—
Plunge in the thick of the fight.
There, in the street or the mart,
That is the place to do right.
